Welfare Said 'Mismanaged,' Ripe For Probe

By LIANE GUENTHER and GERRY SWITZER

In mid-October possibly the biggest welfare cheat of all time surfaced in Chicago.

The alleged "Welfare Queen," Linda Taylor, 47, was arrested and has since been indicted on 31 counts of fraud for collecting welfare checks under 80 different names, 30 addresses, 15 telephone numbers, three dead husbands and 27 children.

Many Americans were shocked and amazed that one woman could bamboozle dozens of Illinois bureaucrats out of about $154,000 a year.

But welfare has mushroomed into what one local ADC (aid to dependent children) mother called "a bureaucratic monster."

And the monster can be beaten.

Fairly Taut Rein

Even in Lancaster County, where administrators keep a fairly taut rein, ADC recipients said it's possible to collect more than the allotted share of ADC.

It's basically the same method millions of Americans use every year to "fudge" on their income taxes. They just don't report all outside income such as wages or child support.

What caseworkers and administrators don't know about, they can't deduct from ADC checks.

The fudging is illegal. The women could face stiff fines, imprisonment or both.

The Legal Aid Society of Lincoln, which has argued cases dealing with discrepancies in ADC, has determined that an investigation of the welfare system is in order.

At a just-completed community planning session, Legal Aid singled out welfare as its "No. 1" priority for investigation.

Details Offered

One woman offered details of three different cases. "I just want you to see how mismanaged it is," she told a Column A reporter.

— In Case X, a woman with one small child was working 25 to 30 hours a week and was required to send in paycheck stubs monthly so ADC payments could be adjusted. When child support started coming from her ex-husband, that amount was subtracted from her ADC check.

— Case Y involved an ADC mother with two children, who received the maximum $210 ADC and maximum food stamps. Although she was working, she never sent in her check stubs for adjustment of income.

— Case Z was a woman with two children who shared a house with Case X. She also drew the full $210 a month ADC in addition to $166 monthly allotment from the Army and salary from working as a substitute teacher.

The woman cited in Case X said she knew the other two and "they were getting so much more . . . I didn't understand it." She said she didn't know how the others got away with it, but she suspected they either lied or were never asked about outside income.

Carol Christopher, acting supervisor for six income maintenance caseworkers and a former caseworker herself said, "There really shouldn't be the discrepancies."

'We Have A Problem'

However, she admitted, if outside income is not reported "we have a problem unless someone else tells us."

Because of periodic reviews and constant checking from the State Welfare Department, any errors or discrepancies would probably be spotted within a month or two, according to County Welfare Director Jerry Lemonds.

"They were always checking on me," Mrs. X said, "asking every detail. They even checked up on my babysitters."

"It just depends on your caseworker," she said. "You might get a stick-in-the-mud who never makes any exceptions. . . Others help out as much as they can."

She said she recently quit ADC and went to work fulltime for less money than she was taking home before.

"I just didn't want to go through the hassles, discrepancies and prying anymore," she said.

Joan Wooten, mother of five who draws some ADC to supplement her income as welfare ombudsman for the Lincoln Action Program, sympathizes with caseworkers.

"If I had caseloads like they do, then to try and keep up with welfare law changes, I know I couldn't do it," she said.

The system is too complicated, she said, resting her right arm on an eight-inch stack of sample forms and regulations for ADC, social services and food stamps.

Welfare Director Lemonds and his assistant Don Williamson concurred that it is difficult to keep up with all regulation changes, much less explain them to every recipient.

'More Changes'

"We have more changes now in a month than we used to have in a year," they said.

Mrs. Christopher, supervisor, also stood up for her caseworkers.

Each of the 15 workers handles between 90 and 100 cases, she pointed out. "And there is an incredible amount of forms required," including sheets for ADC, medical screening, food stamps, child support and the Work Incentive Program (WIP).

In ever case, she said, the worker has to complete between 70 and 80 separate activities, from verifying checking and savings accounts to contacting the children's fathers, if known, photostating, filing, etc.

"If it comes across as a hassle, we regret that," she said. "That's not the purpose or intent. But we have a dual responsibility to our clients and to the taxpayers."

Two years ago, federal Health Education and Welfare (HEW) officials threatened to withhold $689 million in relief funds from the states unless ineligible and overpaid recipients were eliminated.

"Ever since, we've all been concentrating very hard to cut down on mistakes," Mrs. Christopher said.

"It's a traditional government bureaucracy," ADC recipient Mrs. Wooten said, shaking her head. "That's one of the problems."

"They keep talking about simplifying it, but they also keep talking about 'quality control.'"

Besides "quality control" audits by the state of all county welfare records, there are "quality surveillance" reviews of one-third of the cases, which mainly check math and procedures. Then there are federal audits which periodically audit "quality control" audits.

Earthquake Flattens Town

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — An earthquake destroyed a remote mountain village Saturday evening, killing at least 300 persons and seriously injuring another 100, officials said Sunday. A survivor said many of the victims were crushed to death by boulders hurtling down the slopes.

One official in touch with the situation said the toll of dead and injured could be as high as 1,000 in the earthquake-affected area which includes most of a 65-mile-long valley. He said the figure of 300 deaths "is just preliminary."

"We already know of one village that has been flattened and have just spotted another nearby," he said. "There may be several others. The area is so remote we just won't know until we have done a thorough survey."

The quake was the most serious in Pakistan since 1935 when the Baluchistan capital of Quetta was razed. Other reports said runners had to bring news of the disaster to the outside world.

The earthquake hit the village of Patan on Pakistan's Karakoram Highway, which runs from the Chinese border almost to the Indus plain in the center of the country.

Army and civilian rescue teams, doctors and relief supplies have been flown to the village by helicopter and two army medical field hospitals were operating.

But efforts to rush in a greater number of relief workers were being hampered because the highway, meandering through the snow-capped Karakoram Mountains 200 miles north of Rawalpindi, was blocked by landslides.

An army spokesman said "because the area is so remote we still do not have full details of the dead and injured. Rescue work still is going on and we should know more later."

An official in the frontier town of Abbotabad, who was in touch with the situation, said the earthquake affected an area with a population of about 3,000.

Some of the seriously injured have been airlifted to hospitals in Rawalpindi.

One of them, 24-year-old Kima Khan, who comes from Patan, 135 miles north of Rawalpindi, described what happened from his hospital bed.

"I was sitting inside my house when there was this big earth tremor," he said. "The whole house collapsed on top of me. I was rescued, but three of my relatives — an aunt, a young girl and a man — were killed. The whole village was destroyed."

Another hospitalized witness, Mohammad Yasin, said after the quake started huge boulders began tumbling down from the mountains into the valley, killing people on the way. He said there were several tremors.

Rebels, Captives To Fly To Cuba

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Nicaraguan government said Sunday it would fly eight guerrillas to Cuba with 18 freed political prisoners and 12 hostages, including the country's foreign minister and two of its top ambassadors.

The government did not say what prompted its decision, but earlier in the day the guerrillas released seven women, all of them wives of men being held.

Wealthy businessman Jose Maria Castillo and two policemen were killed when the five men and three women of the Sandinista Liberation Front shot their way into Castillo's home early Saturday with submachine guns, officials said. Castillo was a former cabinet minister.

The government said the Spanish government served as intermediary to convince the Havana government to admit the guerrillas and prisoners.

Nicaragua does not have diplomatic relations with Cuba. Estrin Huezo, press secretary for President Anastasio Somoza Debayle, would not say when the plane would leave nor exactly how many would be aboard. He said as soon as the guerrillas and the freed prisoners were safely in Havana the plan was for the aircraft to return to Managua with the hostages.

Huezo also did not say whether the government had agreed to the guerrillas' demand for $5 million ransom.

A Boeing 727 of Nicaragua's Lanica Airline was called back from Miami, Fla., to stand by at a local airport to fly the group out.

Archbishop Miguel Ovando y Bravo acted as mediator to win the release of the seven women. He also served as go-between for the release Saturday of 13 other persons, among them household help, musicians and children.

The guerrillas burst into the Castillo home just after midnight Saturday while a party was in progress for U.S. Ambassador Turner Shelton. The U.S. Embassy said Shelton had left about 30 minutes earlier.

Those still held included Foreign Minister Alejandro Montiel Arguello, Ambassador to the United States Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, U.N. Ambassador Guillermo Lang and Managua Mayor Luis Valle Olivas. An informed source said one U.S. citizen still was in the house. He was identified as David Carpenter, thought to be from New York, and a son-in-law of Castillo.

Boston To Finance School Case Appeal

BOSTON (AP) — The City of Boston will finance an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court of a federal court order to desegregate Boston schools, Mayor Kevin H. White said Sunday.

Although noting that "chances of a reversal are remote," White said at a news conference he is making the appeal to "clarify the issue once and for all."

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals recently upheld an order by U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity that Boston schools must be integrated.

White said he urged the Boston School Committee to hire outside lawyers immediately to handle the appeal and told them the city will pay the fees.

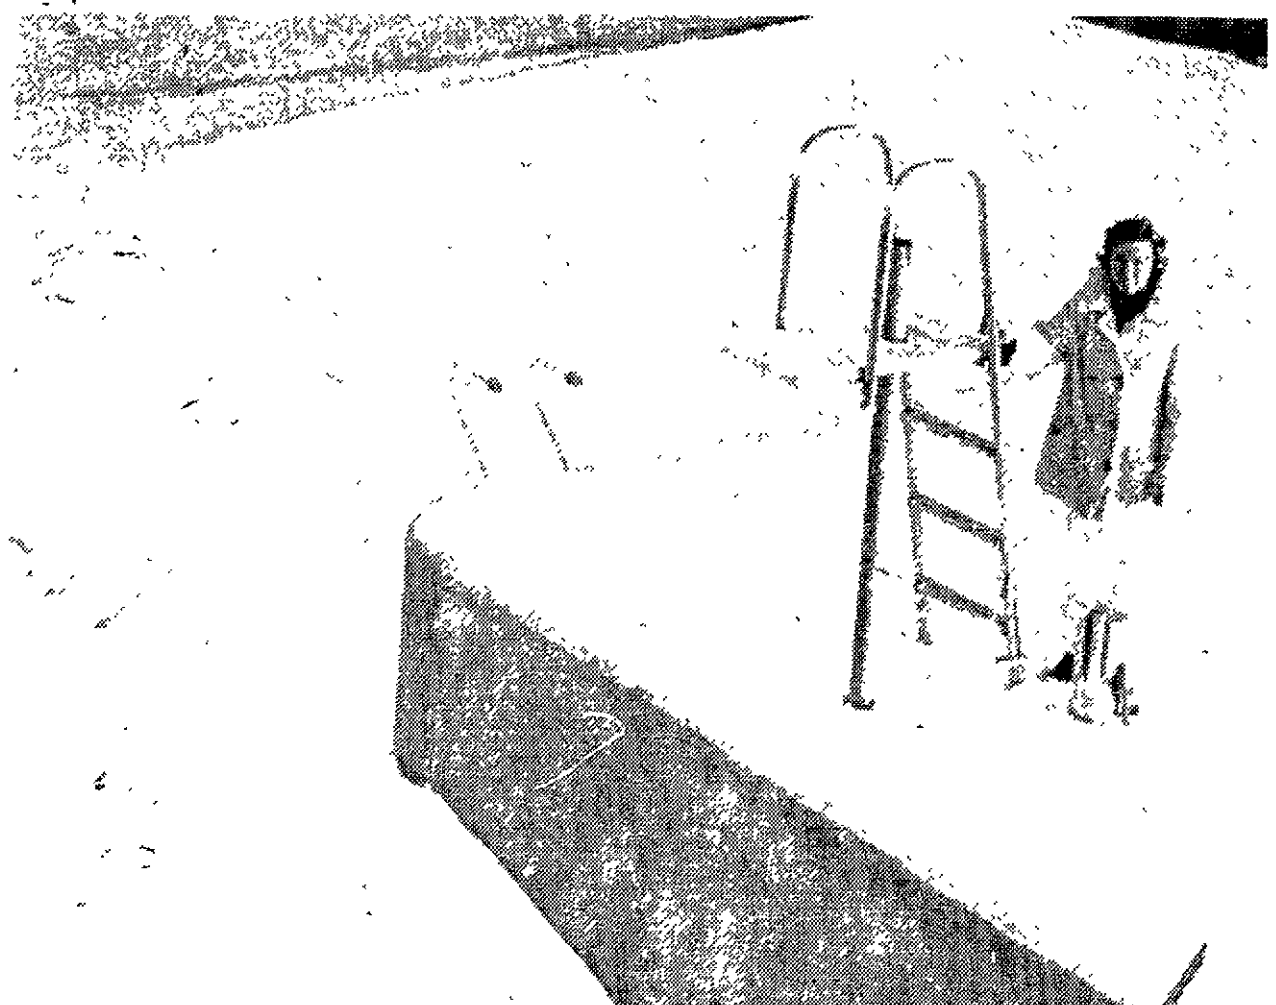

"The people of this city, both black and white, who must live with the consequences of this law, must be assured that no legal stone has been left unturned," the mayor said.

He added that if order is to be achieved in the public schools and if further integration is to be implemented next fall, "there must be no desperate heroics by public officials protesting at the last minute that the court order is neither final or irrevocable."

"The healthiest thing that could happen in the city at this moment is if the Supreme Court would rule on it one way or another."

On Monday, three members of the school committee face contempt of court sanctions for refusing to submit a new citywide integration plan. They say they would rather go to jail than yield.

Garrity cited committee Chairman John J. Kerrigan, John J. McDonough and Paul Ellison for civil contempt on Friday. He asked them to consider changing their positions over the weekend before he decides Monday on a penalty.

NEW POOL . . . and Eagle resident, Mrs. Hagel Pitt, await thaw.

'Down-And-Out' 3 Years Ago, Eagle Is Now 'Up-And-Coming'

By JOEL THORSON, Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Eagle — Nearly all the news from this Cass County town has been good news since the village board approved a housing addition west of town three years ago.

Even more good things are in store. With the spring thaw will come the opening of a new 7.1-acre park, the first in the village's history. A swimming pool heads a long list of recreational attractions to be offered by the yet-unnamed park.

And with an expected thaw in interest rates will come more new housing and more population growth, predicts Mrs. Warren Hagel-Pitt, who heads the Eagle Community Improvement Committee. "I'm sure when the housing (industry) opens up, we'll grow again," she says.

Up And Coming

Eagle today is an optimistic commuter community of nearly 700 inhabitants with a park, pool, bank, library, school addition, new post office, newspaper, beauty shop, downtown "mini-park" and paved main street. Just three years ago it was a typical down-and-out small town of 425 which enjoyed none of those amenities.

Other improvements being contemplated in various quarters include a new sewage treatment plant, a combination fire hall-community center, and a grocery store.

Eagle increasingly functions as a bedroom community ("We're nearly all commuters out here," says Mrs. Hagel-Pitt), and that fact undoubtedly has a lot to do with Eagle's success. Increased population translates into increased tax revenue and increased business confidence.

But nothing could be done without the involvement of lots of people, stresses Mrs. Hagel-Pitt: "It's a constant effort for everybody," she says, "to keep pulling to keep up improving." Young newcomers pitch right in along with more established residents to accomplish change, she says.

Honorable Mention

Whatever the causes, Eagle's improvements were remarkable enough to garner an honorable mention in the 1974 Nebraska Community Improvement Program's (NCIP) Class II (1970 pop. 200-500) competition. A special plaque was awarded Eagle for the community newsletter published by the local improvement committee.

The newsletter, the Eagle Community News, is financed with donations and distributed door-to-door by the Alvo-Eagle Angels, a 4-H group, on their paper-recycling rounds. The News carries "news in advance" on community happenings, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt says.

The town was "tickled" at its NCIP placement among the top half-dozen towns of its size in the state, according to the committee chairperson. "I wouldn't give up that plaque for anything," she says. "When you win like that you get new enthusiasm."

Eagle's changes have also impressed the Small Cities Development Associates, creators of the Eagle Heights addition west of town. A partnership formed three years ago by People's Natural Gas, Krell Housing Consultants and Higgins Construction Co., all of Omaha, Small Cities was formed to bring investment into small towns to help build housing. Eagle Heights was its first pilot project.

Film Shares Experience

The town's overall growth is to be the subject of a 16-millimeter film made by Small Cities, said Mrs. Hagel-Pitt. The film, entitled "Project Renaissance: Eagle, Nebraska," will be shown all over the U.S. and Canada to give other towns the benefit of Eagle's experience in small-town survival, she said.

Small Cities is largely responsible for creation of the new park, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt said. The 7.1 acres, unusable for construction because of high groundwater, was donated by Small Cities for use as a park.

A park board was formed, which sought and won a federal Land and Water Conservation Fund grant for half of the $139,000 park expense. The state chipped in 25%, and Eagle citizens financed their 25% share with a bond issue.

"We got a lot for our money," said Mrs. Hagel-Pitt. What Eagle got (besides the pool) was a tennis court, ball diamond, basketball court, sled run, skating pond, horseshoe area, picnic area and shelter, walking and bicycling paths, parking lot, play equipment, and lots of wooded open space.

A 1972 bond issue in District 145 built a $600,000 addition to the Eagle Elementary School, including classroom and administrative space, a learning center, and a library with reading center. A women's club — the Evening Eagle — plans to accumulate a library to be kept in adult section of the school library, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt said.

Police Overpower Rioting Inmates

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police backed by troops stormed the main cellblock of Portlaoise prison Sunday night and overpowered Irish Republican Army prisoners who had taken 27 guards hostage, a government statement said.

The statement by Justice Minister Patrick Cooney said the guards were "manhandled in various degrees and at least one was punched and beaten" before they were freed. It also said six prisoners suffered cuts and bruises when police broke through the mattress and furniture barricades that had sealed off the cellblock.

Cooney's report of violence contradicted earlier statements by prison officials and police at the scene who had said that the guards were not harmed and there were no injuries to either prisoners or police.

A police spokesman told newsmen earlier that the 120 IRA prisoners had surrendered their hostages peacefully and returned to their cells after negotiations with the prison governor, John Kelly.

There was no explanation for the different reports. Newsmen were kept nearly half a mile away from the prison during the siege and the assault that ended it.

The prisoners held the cellblock for five hours and prison officials said considerable damage was done to the cellblock. Wreckage of furniture and fittings was strewn about. A water pipe was broken and water flooded the cellblock floor.

A prison official said the disturbance was in protest over last week's Christmas dinner of soup, chicken and plum pudding and to demand changes in the administration of the maximum security prison 50 miles southwest of Dublin.

Aston Martin Co. Folds

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Aston Martin company, manufacturer of world-famed sports cars, announced it is ceasing production Monday and will go into voluntary liquidation.

Chairman William Wilson said the company could not raise $2.3 million needed to keep going, even though it has orders worth twice that amount.

The crash means 500 skilled workers in the company's Buckinghamshire County plant will lose their jobs.

Aston Martin has been hit by cash problems during recent months and there also have been reports of a decline in orders for the firm's gasoline-hungry autos like the V-8 Lagonda Luxury.

Wilson told newsmen he will ask that a receiver be appointed as soon as possible.

He said the company could raise $220,000 itself but still needed another $1,380,000 from other sources.

"I do not feel bitter, but very frustrated," Wilson said. "It seems a tragedy that companies of this kind should be lost for the sake of a few hundred thousand pounds."

Welfare Said 'Mismanaged,' Ripe For Probe

By LIANE GUENTHER and GERRY SWITZER

In mid-October possibly the biggest welfare cheat of all time surfaced in Chicago.

The alleged "Welfare Queen," Linda Taylor, 47, was arrested and has since been indicted on 31 counts of fraud for collecting welfare checks under 80 different names, 30 addresses, 15 telephone numbers, three dead husbands and 27 children.

Many Americans were shocked and amazed that one woman could bamboozle dozens of Illinois bureaucrats out of about $154,000 a year.

But welfare has mushroomed into what one local ADC (aid to dependent children) mother called "a bureaucratic monster."

And the monster can be beaten.

Fairly Taut Rein

Even in Lancaster County, where administrators keep a fairly taut rein, ADC recipients said it's possible to collect more than the allotted share of ADC.

It's basically the same method millions of Americans use every year to "fudge" on their income taxes. They just don't report all outside income such as wages or child support.

What caseworkers and administrators don't know about, they can't deduct from ADC checks.

The fudging is illegal. The women could face stiff fines, imprisonment or both.

The Legal Aid Society of Lincoln, which has argued cases dealing with discrepancies in ADC, has determined that an investigation of the welfare system is in order.

At a just-completed community planning session, Legal Aid singled out welfare as its "No. 1" priority for investigation.

Details Offered

One woman offered details of three different cases. "I just want you to see how mismanaged it is," she told a Column A reporter.

— In Case X, a woman with one small child was working 25 to 30 hours a week and was required to send in paycheck stubs monthly so ADC payments could be adjusted. When child support started coming from her ex-husband, that amount was subtracted from her ADC check.

— Case Y involved an ADC mother with two children, who received the maximum $210 ADC and maximum food stamps. Although she was working, she never sent in her check stubs for adjustment of income.

— Case Z was a woman with two children who shared a house with Case X. She also drew the full $210 a month ADC in addition to $166 monthly allotment from the Army and salary from working as a substitute teacher.

The woman cited in Case X said she knew the other two and "they were getting so much more . . . I didn't understand it." She said she didn't know how the others got away with it, but she suspected they either lied or were never asked about outside income.

Carol Christopher, acting supervisor for six income maintenance caseworkers and a former caseworker herself said, "There really shouldn't be the discrepancies."

We Have A Problem

However, she admitted, if outside income is not reported "we have a problem unless someone else tells us."

Because of periodic reviews and constant checking from the State Welfare Department, any errors or discrepancies would probably be spotted within a month or two, according to County Welfare Director Jerry Lemonds.

"They were always checking on me," Mrs. X said, "asking every detail. They even checked up on my babysitters."

"It just depends on your caseworker," she said. "You might get a stick-in-the-mud who never makes any exceptions. . . Others help out as much as they can."

She said she recently quit ADC and went to work fulltime for less money than she was taking home before.

"I just didn't want to go through the hassles, discrepancies and prying anymore," she said.

Joan Wooten, mother of five who draws some ADC to supplement her income as welfare ombudsman for the Lincoln Action Program, sympathizes with caseworkers.

"If I had caseloads like they do, then to try and keep up with welfare law changes, I know I couldn't do it," she said.

The system is too complicated, she said, resting her right arm on an eight-inch stack of sample forms and regulations for ADC, social services and food stamps.

Welfare Director Lemonds and his assistant Don Williamson concurred that it is difficult to keep up with all regulation changes, much less explain them to every recipient.

More Changes

"We have more changes now in a month than we used to have in a year," they said.

Mrs. Christopher, supervisor, also stood up for her caseworkers.

Each of the 15 workers handles between 90 and 100 cases, she pointed out. "And there is an incredible amount of forms required," including sheets for ADC, medical screening, food stamps, child support and the Work Incentive Program (WIP).

In ever case, she said, the worker has to complete between 70 and 80 separate activities, from verifying checking and savings accounts to contacting the children's fathers, if known, photostating, filing, etc.

"If it comes across as a hassle, we regret that," she said. "That's not the purpose or intent. But we have a dual responsibility to our clients and to the taxpayers."

Two years ago, federal Health Education and Welfare (HEW) officials threatened to withhold $689 million in relief funds from the states unless ineligible and overpaid recipients were eliminated.

"Ever since, we've all been concentrating very hard to cut down on mistakes," Mrs. Christopher said.

"It's a traditional government bureaucracy," ADC recipient Mrs. Wooten said, shaking her head. "That's one of the problems."

"They keep talking about simplifying it, but they also keep talking about 'quality control.'"

Besides "quality control" audits by the state of all county welfare records, there are "quality surveillance" reviews of one-third of the cases, which mainly check math and procedures. Then there are federal audits which periodically audit "quality control" audits.

Boston To Finance School Case Appeal

BOSTON (AP) — The City of Boston will finance an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court of a federal court order to desegregate Boston schools, Mayor Kevin H. White said Sunday.

NEW POOL . . . and Eagle resident, Mrs. Hagel Pitt, await thaw.

The newsletter, the Eagle Community News, is financed with donations and distributed door-to-door by the Alvo-Eagle Angels, a 4-H group, on their paper-recycling rounds. The News carries "news in advance" on community happenings, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt says.

The town was "tickled" at its NCIP placement among the top half-dozen towns of its size in the state, according to the committee chairperson. "I wouldn't give up that plaque for anything," she says. "When you win like that you get new enthusiasm."

Eagle's changes have also impressed the Small Cities Development Associates, creators of the Eagle Heights addition west of town. A partnership formed three years ago by People's Natural Gas, Krell Housing Consultants and Higgins Construction Co., all of Omaha, Small Cities was formed to bring investment into small towns to help build housing. Eagle Heights was its first pilot project.

Film Shares Experience

The town's overall growth is to be the subject of a 16-millimeter film made by Small Cities, said Mrs. Hagel-Pitt. The film, entitled "Project Renaissance: Eagle, Nebraska," will be shown all over the U.S. and Canada to give other towns the benefit of Eagle's experience in small-town survival, she said.

Small Cities is largely responsible for creation of the new park, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt said. The 7.1 acres, unusable for construction because of high groundwater, was donated by Small Cities for use as a park.

A park board was formed, which sought and won a federal Land and Water Conservation Fund grant for half of the $139,000 park expense. The state chipped in 25%, and Eagle citizens financed their 25% share with a bond issue.

"We got a lot for our money," said Mrs. Hagel-Pitt. What Eagle got (besides the pool) was a tennis court, ball diamond, basketball court, sled run, skating pond, horseshoe area, picnic area and shelter, walking and bicycling paths, parking lot, play equipment, and lots of wooded open space.

A 1972 bond issue in District 145 built a $600,000 addition to the Eagle Elementary School, including classroom and administrative space, a learning center, and a library with reading center. A women's club — the Evening Eagle — plans to accumulate a library to be kept in adult section of the school library, Mrs. Hagel-Pitt said.

Police Overpower Rioting Inmates

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police backed by troops stormed the main cellblock of Portlaoise prison Sunday night and overpowered Irish Republican Army prisoners who had taken 27 guards hostage, a government statement said.

The statement by Justice Minister Patrick Cooney said the guards were "manhandled in various degrees and at least one was punched and beaten" before they were freed. It also said six prisoners suffered cuts and bruises when police broke through the mattress and furniture barricades that had sealed off the cellblock.

Cooney's report of violence contradicted earlier statements by prison officials and police at the scene who had said that the guards were not harmed and there were no injuries to either prisoners or police.

A police spokesman told newsmen earlier that the 120 IRA prisoners had surrendered their hostages peacefully and returned to their cells after negotiations with the prison governor, John Kelly.

There was no explanation for the different reports. Newsmen were kept nearly half a mile away from the prison during the siege and the assault that ended it.

The prisoners held the cellblock for five hours and prison officials said considerable damage was done to the cellblock. Wreckage of furniture and fittings was strewn about. A water pipe was broken and water flooded the cellblock floor.

A prison official said the disturbance was in protest over last week's Christmas dinner of soup, chicken and plum pudding and to demand changes in the administration of the maximum security prison 50 miles southwest of Dublin.

Aston Martin Co. Folds

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Aston Martin company, manufacturer of world-famed sports cars, announced it is ceasing production Monday and will go into voluntary liquidation.

Chairman William Wilson said the company could not raise $2.3 million needed to keep going, even though it has orders worth twice that amount.

The crash means 500 skilled workers in the company's Buckinghamshire County plant will lose their jobs.

Aston Martin has been hit by cash problems during recent months and there also have been reports of a decline in orders for the firm's gasoline-hungry autos like the V-8 Lagonda Luxury.

Wilson told newsmen he will ask that a receiver be appointed as soon as possible.

He said the company could raise $920,000 itself but still needed another $1,380,000 from other sources.

"I do not feel bitter, but very frustrated," Wilson said. "It seems a tragedy that companies of this kind should be lost for the sake of a few hundred thousand pounds."

Laotian Rebels Release Six American Hostages

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Rebel Laotian army troops have freed six of the 19 Americans held captive in a northwest provincial capital, informed American sources reported Monday.

The sources said three men, two children and a woman were released from the town of Ban Houei Sai, crossed the Mekong River to the town of Chiang Khong, in Thailand, and were being flown to Vientiane.

Ban Houei Sai was seized Tuesday by about 100 rebel soldiers who demanded the town be declared politically neutral and the government repeal the opium law, which makes it illegal to cultivate opium for sale and stipulates that only the head of a household may cultivate it for family consumption.

Opium has long been a chief cash crop in the region. Sources said a government delegation headed by Interior Minister Pheng Phongsavan, a neutralist, and Information Minister Prince Souk Vongsak, a member of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, reached an accord with the rebel leaders Saturday.

No details of the agreement were immediately available, but the sources said it was likely allegedly corrupt officials in the area would be replaced and rebel troops would withdraw from the town and return to their former positions.

The U.S. Embassy Sunday identified the Americans as: John A. Huxtable, area coordinator for the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), his wife Margaret, their daughter Hatsady, 5, and son Sisawath, 4.

Other USAID officials were William W. Sage, a refugee relief worker; Wayne Johnson, also a refugee relief worker, and his wife Thavy; Gary E. Alex, an agricultural specialist; James R. Bowman, agricultural specialist, and Raymond Boone.

Mrs. Andie Linn, wife of International Voluntary Services Director James Linn, her daughters Latala, 3, and Amphaphon, 5.

Other Americans were Miss Karen Smith, a nurse at the U.S. Embassy medical unit in Vientiane, and the Rev. Jerry Torgerson, a missionary, his wife Rose, daughters Jenny, 10, and Jill, and son Jeffrey, 2.

Three More Quit CIA

Washington — Three more high-ranking officials of the Central Intelligence Agency resigned last week in a major shake-up of the agency's counterintelligence division, well-informed government sources said. Their resignations occurred within a week of that of James Angleton, who had been the CIA's counterintelligence chief. William E. Colby, the agency's director, reportedly accepted without objection the resignation of Raymond Rocco, who was Angleton's chief deputy; William J. Hood, executive officer of the counterintelligence division, and Newton S. (Scotty) Miller, chief of operations.

Defense Budgets Eroded

Washington — Inflation is beginning to slow the steady growth in defense budgets of the Western alliance and Japan, though not yet to the damaging degree that had been feared by defense planners in the United States. A country-by-country survey by the New York Times on the impact of inflation on defense budgets of the major allies of the United States finds that most of them are increasing their budgets to keep pace with inflation, except Britain, Canada and Italy, and that the U.S. defense budget has been hardest hit by inflation.

Koch's Request 'Irrelevant'

Tel Aviv — The interior minister of Israel, Yosef Burg, has dismissed as irrelevant a request by Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., that Israel refuse citizenship to Bernard Bergman, a New York nursing home operator, pending the outcome of a U.S. Senate hearing next month on nursing homes. Bergman is among 35 persons affiliated with nursing homes in New York state for whom subpoenas have been issued by a subcommittee of the Senate Special Committee on Aging.

Ford Abandons Surtax

Vail, Colo. — A high administration official said President Ford has abandoned his proposal for an income tax surcharge as an anti-inflation measure. Government economists reportedly were putting strong pressure on the President to do the opposite and cut taxes as a means of pulling the economy out of a worsening recession.

Tax Cut May Be Small

Washington — The continuing, apparently uncontrollable, increase in federal spending threatens to cut the size of any anti-recession tax reduction that President Ford will propose to Congress next month, according to administration officials. The major constraint on a tax reduction is the huge size of the budget deficit that will have to be considered. The deficit may exceed $30 billion.

Scrutiny Promised

New York — Warren M. Anderson, the New York Senate's majority leader, issued an economic challenge to the incoming administration of Gov. Hugh L. Carey, saying there should be no state tax increases "for whatever reasons" and promising scrutiny of the new governor's budget "to a degree never before undertaken."

Benny 'Had A Rare Magic' Bob Hope Says In Tribute

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "He was a national treasure," Bob Hope remarked of Jack Benny as the famous figures of the entertainment world gathered in old Hollywood fashion to pay a final tribute Sunday to the gentle, self-effacing comedian who died Thursday night.

About 350 persons crowded into the Hillside Memorial Park Chapel in suburban Culver City for the service while 2,000 others stood behind police lines outside in the late December sunshine and heard Hope's eulogy, Hebrew prayers and a brief, tearful tribute by Benny's closest friend, George Burns.

But it was an orderly crowd by Hollywood standards and the most star-filled in recent memory, reflecting the film community's respect for Benny, who died of cancer of the pancreas at 80.

Hope began by quoting a message to Benny's widow, Mary Livingstone, from President Ford and his family. His usual composure shaken, Hope remarked, "Last Thursday night, the world lost someone it loved very much . . . But the void that is left is quickly filled with happy memories."

Hope commented that great performers come along rarely and he named Al Jolson, Humphrey Bogart, Clark Gable, Will Rogers, Maurice Chevalier — and Jack Benny.

"He had a rare magic, like Picasso and Gershwin . . . He was the undisputed master of timing and yet he left us much too soon.

"He was stingy to the end; he only gave us 80 years and that wasn't enough."

Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin of the Wilshire Boulevard Temple where Benny worshipped, intoned the 23rd Psalm and the Mourner's Kaddish and introduced Burns.

The gravel-voiced comedian seemed bowed by his 78 years and said haltingly, "I don't know whether I'll be able to do this, but I told Mary I'd try."

Burns continued in a low, faltering voice:

"You all knew Jack. What can I tell you about him that you don't already know? I knew him for 55 years and I consider myself very fortunate, very special because of it. I can't imagine my life without him. I'm going to miss him."

The crowd began to form at the cemetery in early morning. Onlookers pressed forward for a closer view of the celebrities and sometimes had to be pushed back by police. A long row of limousines dazzled in the sun along the cemetery parkway.

Among other celebrities buried at Hillside Memorial Park are Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Jeff Chandler and Hal March.

Most of Benny's peers in the Hollywood comedy world sat in the glass-sided chapel — Milton Berle, George Jessel, Andy Griffith, Danny Thomas, Edgar Bergen, Johnny Carson, Jack Carter, Groucho Marx. Film stars included James Stewart, Gregory Peck, Rosalind Russell, Frank Sinatra, Jack Lemmon, Henry Fonda, Walter Matthau, Merle Oberon, Cesar Romero, Goldie Hawn, Candice Bergen, Dinah Shore and Robert Stack.

The political world was represented by California Gov. Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy; U.S. Sen. John Tunney; former U.S. Sen. George Murphy, and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

The members of Benny's radio and television casts were there — Phil Harris, Dennis Day, Don Wilson, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Mel Blanc.

The services were simple and brief, in keeping with Benny's style and sense of timing. The closed casket was covered with fern and gardenias, and bowers of floral display lined the back wall of the chapel.

After the 20-minute ceremony, the people who had waited outside were permitted to enter the chapel and pass by the casket as the celebrities waited.

The widow did not appear, remaining secluded in the family room at the side of the chapel. When she arrived with her daughter, Joan Blumofe, Mrs. Benny seemed overcome with grief and remained in her limousine for several minutes to compose herself.

The entombment was private.

21 American Tourists Killed As Guatemalan Plane Crashes

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A chartered airplane crashed in flames while taking off from a remote jungle airport near the Mayan ruins of Tikal, killing 21 American tourists and a Guatemalan crew of three, officials said Sunday.

Victims of the Saturday evening crash included two persons from Columbus, Ohio, a family of four from New Jersey and 15 persons from the New York City area, including a mother and her two children.

The twin-engine, propeller-driven aircraft had just lifted off from Tikal airport in northern Guatemala and was bound for Guatemala City when it crashed 100 yards from the unpaved runway and burst into flames.

Cause of the accident was not known, officials said. The plane had taken the tourists to visit the Mayan ruins at Tikal in the state of Peten.

Rescue workers said they had difficulty removing the badly burned bodies from the wreckage because of the jungle darkness. The victims were placed in plastic body bags Sunday and were flown to Guatemala City where they were identified.

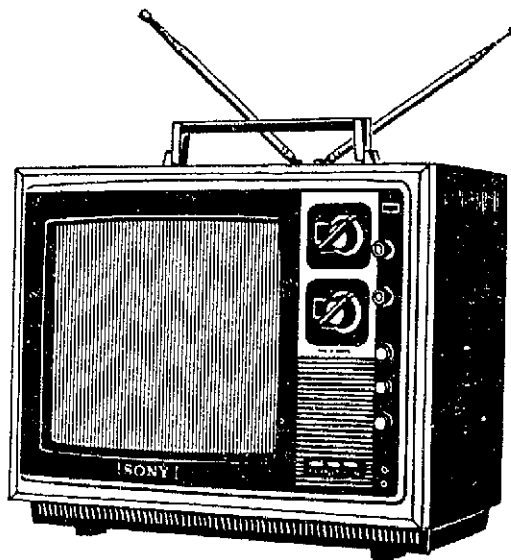

Barbara Smith, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Consulate in Guatemala City, said the victims were part of a group of 90 tourists, most of them Americans, who had arrived in the Guatemalan capital by bus from San Salvador in neighboring El Salvador. They had flown to Central America from Miami.

She said about 70 members of the group returned from the Tikal tour on other flights or had decided to skip the trip and stayed in the Guatemalan capital.

The Guatemalan air force said the Lockheed Lodestar aircraft was owned by Erwin Ortiz of Guatemala City. The two pilots were identified as Walter Lavin Roadas, 42, and Luis Aguilar Alagra, 27, both Guatemalan air force reservists, and the steward as German Prem, 23.

Magazine Picks King Faisal As Its Man Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine has named King Faisal of Saudi Arabia as its Man of the Year for 1974.

The magazine said the king was a "principal factor" in quadrupling oil prices. He "now holds more power than any other leader to lower them or raise them," it added.

"Both in his own right, and as a symbol of the other newly powerful potentates of oil, Saudi Arabia's King Faisal is the Man of the Year," the Time cover story said.

Venezuela Will Resume Diplomatic Ties With Cuba

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Venezuela, which initiated the drive to isolate Cuba from its Latin American neighbors 11 years ago, signed an agreement Sunday to resume diplomatic relations with the government of Prime Minister Fidel Castro, according to a Venezuelan diplomatic source.

He said ambassadors will be exchanged some time in January.

The document, he said, was signed after two weeks of negotiations between the United Nations ambassadors of the two countries, Simon Alberto Consalvi of Venezuela and Ricardo Alarcon Quesada of Cuba.

The source added that a communique issued after the ceremony stated that relations will be resumed "in accordance with the unbreakable friendship that unites both peoples and the mutual respect toward each other." It also emphasized that trade will be resumed between the countries.

Venezuela broke diplomatic ties with Cuba in 1961. In 1963 it filed a complaint with the Organization of American States (OAS) claiming Cuba was sending arms to leftist guerrillas in Venezuela in an attempt to overthrow the government of President Romulo Betancourt.

The OAS imposed an economic and diplomatic boycott against Cuba in 1964 and accused the Castro regime of fomenting revolution in Latin America.

Mexico, however, refused to go along with the isolation of Cuba, and in recent years several other Latin American nations have restored diplomatic relations with the country.

Last month, Venezuela, Colombia and Costa Rica declared that the Communist island no longer presented the threat of revolution to the Americas that it did a decade ago. They called a meeting of OAS foreign ministers in Ecuador to consider lifting the sanctions.

The 12-3 vote with six abstentions fell two votes short of the two-thirds majority needed, but it does not prevent individual governments from restoring relations with Cuba.

The United States abstained in the vote, claiming that "no clear satisfaction" exists that the Castro government has stopped exporting revolution.

TUCKER, Ga. (AP) — Roly-poly comedian A. J. "Junior" Samples, one of the stars of television's homespun "Hee Haw" series may never be roly-poly again. His doctor has put him on a diet.

Samples, 48, has lost 26 pounds in the two weeks he's been hospitalized for treatment of his diabetic condition and of a cholesterol level he says is the highest his doctor has ever seen.

Since he was admitted Dec. 16,

Samples has gone from 318 pounds to 292.

"I get stuff that ain't fit to eat," he said woefully in an interview Sunday. "Skim milk. Cereals. A few carrots. Stuff like that."

His doctor, Andrew Trimble, said Samples is in good condition and will be released soon. He was even allowed to spend Christmas day at home.

Samples said, "I feel mighty weak. I ain't getting much to eat.

And I'm going to have to stay on a pretty strict diet after I get out, I think."

"He gets on to them (the hospital staff) sometimes on account of they don't bring him enough to eat," Mrs. Grace Samples, Junior's wife, said in a telephone interview from the Samples' country home near Cumming, Ga. "But they have to do what the doctor says."

Mrs. Samples said Junior normally eats two eggs and a ground beef patty for breakfast and a full meal — baked chicken and dressing and lots of vegetables, for example — for both lunch and dinner.

"He loves beer," she added.

Mrs. Samples, who weighs a trim 140 pounds, said that Junior loves to eat and does quite a bit of it.

"But in fact," she said, "he don't eat no more than I DO. I don't know why he weighs so much more than I do."

Youth, 17, Dies Of Self-Inflicted Gunshot Wound

Lincoln Star Special

Beatrice — A 17-year-old rural Filley youth died early Sunday of a self-inflicted gunshot wound from a .22-caliber rifle, Deputy Gage County Atty. Charles Balsiger said Sunday night.

Balsiger said David Arthur Dorn was found by his brother, Eddie, about 12:30 a.m., the time of the incident. The boys' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Art Dorn, were not at home at the time, Balsiger said.

Besides his parents and brother, Davis is survived by two sisters, Mrs. William (Cynthia) McLaughlin of Virginia, Neb., and Beverly, at home, and grandparents, Mrs. Mary Dorn of Beatrice and Mrs. Katie Mahler of Adams.

Funeral services will be 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the American Lutheran Church at Filley. Pastor Paul Kenyon will officiate. Burial will be in Filley Cemetery.

Darwin Refugees Sneak Pets On Board Plane

Darwin — Australia — Families leaving Darwin in the airlift following the cyclone that smashed the city Christmas Day are told they can carry 50 pounds of possessions but no pets aboard the planes.

"With little children you have to be lenient," he said. "Many of them have lost mothers or fathers, and it would be heart-breaking to take away their pets."

To encourage residents to leave Darwin and reduce the population to about a quarter of its original 45,000, the government has promised that people who register for immediate evacuation will have their return fares paid when the city is ready to receive them. Departing residents are also permitted to name their destination for the free outward trip by special evacuation aircraft.

A man with a four-day stubble and weary look found the energy to smile and say to his wife as they waited to register, "this might be a good time to take that holiday in Tasmania we were talking about."

Tasmania is the farthest point south in Australia from Darwin.

Stretton Credited

Much of the credit for the success of the airlift and the relief operation here is readily accorded by residents to Maj. Gen. Alan Stretton, the director general of Australia's recently created Natural Disasters Organization.

Stretton has been reporting to the public each day over the Darwin station of the Australian Broadcasting Commission in a fireside-chat manner that seems to inspire confidence.

Yesterday he told listeners: "Turst me, stay with me, don't listen to rumors about disease, the crisis will be over in a few days."

Today, Stretton, who was deputy director of the Joint Intelligence Agency until his ap pointment as chief of the National Disaster Organization, went on the air to rebut rumors of an outbreak of typhoid and of widespread police shooting of looters: "I have a bond with you," he said. "If there are problems you will be told."

A Darwin resident commented, "There's a bloke you can trust."

Court Load Said Getting Higher

Omaha (AP) — Despite four weeks of continuous civil and criminal jury cases, the Douglas County District Court appears to be losing ground, according to Presiding Judge James A. Buckley.

Buckley said the four-week pattern differed from a normal schedule in that usual procedure is two weeks of jury trials followed by two weeks for non-jury matters.

Even so, he said, the judges lost ground.

While 114 criminal cases were completed during the four-week period ended Dec. 20, 124 new criminal cases were filed by the county attorney's office.

Buckley said 250 pending criminal cases constitute a "level of real concern, and we can't tolerate it getting much higher."

Buckley said the judges weren't complaining. "It's our job to dispose of the cases filed," he said.

"We're involved in a national increase in crime that we hope will level off and eventually go back down," he said.

Statistics from the office of District Court Administrator Paul E. White demonstrate why the court is faced with so many criminal cases.

From July 1, the beginning of the court year, to Dec. 20, the county attorney's office filed 530 criminal cases. If the figure remains steady in the first half of 1975, the total number of felony filings will exceed 1,000.

That total would apparently be the highest ever, exceeding the 972 filed in the 12 months ending in June 1972.

Christmas Tree Catches Afire; Damage Heavy

A fire at the Mary Pohlenz residence at 5931 Elkcrest Sunday afternoon resulted in "considerable" damage to the house and its contents, according to District Fire Chief Mel Keller.

Keller said Mrs. Pohlenz told him she turned the Christmas tree lights on, then she heard a sizzling and the tree burst into flames.

The living room was gutted, Keller said, and the rest of the house received extensive heat and smoke damage. There was severe structural damage in the attic.

The family's dog died in the fire and the cat was missing, the chief said.

Autopsy Slated In Baby's Death

Officials are investigating the death Sunday morning of a 16-month-old baby in the Capitol City.

Police said the baby, Christine Renee Cox, daughter of Reva

Cox of 4931 Spruce, apparently died of natural causes after crawling in bed with her mother earlier in the morning.

An autopsy is scheduled for Monday morning, police said.

Darwin — Australia — Families leaving Darwin in the airlift following the cyclone that smashed the city Christmas Day are told they can carry 50 pounds of possessions but no pets aboard the planes.

Sounds Great, But . . .

The major facelift for O St. through the central business district proposed some days ago by the Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) sounds great — up to a point.

The first phase of a three-phase plan drawn up by local architects proposes ample landscaping of O St. between 9th and 16th along the sidewalk areas and the restructuring of the 13th and O intersection to reinforce its position as the crossroads of Lincoln. Vehicular traffic and on-street parking would be retained on O St. and north-south streets would remain open to through traffic during the initial phase. So far, so good.

The second and third phases sound great too, esthetically and recreationally and, in some respects, commercially, speaking. Sidewalk cafes, miniparks, fountains, open theatres, playgrounds and the like are envisioned on a pedestrian-oriented O St. closed to through traffic and bereft of on-street parking places. One's head swims at the thought of such a downtown metamorphosis.

However, we share Miller & Paine executive John Campbell's apprehension over a closed-off O St. Certainly, some other long-awaited improvements — such as the Centrum and the traffic-bearing bypass routes — will have to become realities before it is feasible to close off O St. to through traffic.

There are other plans in the works — making 13th St. through downtown a "prestige avenue" and the beautification of J St. from the County-City Building to the State Capitol — which if implemented will reduce further the number of on-street parking spaces in the downtown area and probably reduce further the total traffic carrying capacity of downtown streets.

The closing off of O St. without replacement traffic-bearing streets and without sufficient off-street parking will further complicate matters.

Downtown will asphyxiate if it does not first solve its traffic problems: how to move it and where to park it.

Treas. Office Draws Bad Marks

A report prepared by State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson's staff and released last week suggests that the operation of the Lancaster County treasurer's office is an accountant's nightmare.

Left and right hands literally do not know what the others are doing, it is alleged, and the same people who take in cash are responsible for keeping a record of it — a practice which the report suggests is contrary to good bookkeeping practices.

The volume of money processed through County Treasurer Frank Golden's office annually "would indicate the necessity for control systems, machine modernization and sound administrative control, responsive and responsible to the taxpayer as well as county management," the report states.

The auditors "urgently recommend" that a study be undertaken of office procedures.

A cash shortage in the motor vehicles

division discovered last September prompted the review by the state auditor's office.

The Star had hoped that the report could have been issued before the November election (in which Golden was re-elected) so that voters would have some basis on which to judge the candidates. But that is water over the dam, and it probably is just as well, because a report weighted heavily for or against (as it turned out, against) Golden's performance issued just prior to the election would not have given either candidate proper time to respond.

Some sort of response is expected of Golden now, however. The cash shortage and the auditors' report should be convincing enough evidence that all is not running smoothly in the county treasurer's office.

The next four "Golden Years" should be dedicated to running a considerably tighter ship.

Law And Vengeance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Another year, another Christmas, have passed and T. J. Reddy, James Grant and Charles Parker are still in prison near here. Another hearing has been held. A judge — Sam J. Ervin III, son of the retiring senator — is weighing the evidence again. So the drama of the "Charlotte Three" drags on. As Reddy put it in one of the 400 poems he has written in prison:

Like fish
Out of breath
In air
I keep my nose
Just above
Water here.

T. J. Reddy, 28, black, writer and artist, was co-editor of the Arts Magazine at the University of North Carolina, later director of an anti-poverty center in Charlotte, a writer for the Charlotte Observer, an activist and counsellor among his people. James Grant of Connecticut abandoned a Ph.D. in chemistry to become an organizer and volunteer worker among southern blacks. Charles Parker was T. J. Reddy's assistant at the Charlotte anti-poverty center.

What are three such men doing in prison on arson charges — Reddy for 20 years, Grant for 25 and Parker for 10? The story begins in 1970 when two blacks with lengthy criminal records, Walter D. Washington and Theodore A. Hood, were arrested on federal charges of manufacturing and possessing dynamite during a racial disturbance in Oxford, N.C., in May, 1970. They jumped bail and were re-arrested, and the federal government also brought charges against James Grant and Ben Chavis, another black activist, for allegedly aiding and abetting the bail jump.

In July, 1971, while still in jail and unable to raise bond, Hood and Washington, apparently made aware of the prosecutors' interest in T. J. Reddy, James Grant and Charles Parker, signed a statement alleging that the three had burned the Lazy B stables near Charlotte three years earlier. They denied it, but were charged with arson, arrested and placed under heavy bond. No further charges were brought against Hood and Washington, although they said they had participated in the burning of the stables.

Federal authorities turned the matter over to the State of North Carolina, which tried the "Charlotte Three" in 1972, terming them "political terrorists." But Walter Washington and Theodore Hood were the only prosecution witnesses. The state argued that Reddy and Parker once had been denied riding privileges at the Lazy B, and later had returned to burn it down, with 15 horses dying in the blaze. A jury of 11 whites and one black found them guilty, and Judge Frank Sneyd levied sentences that were unusually harsh even by the standards of the law-and-order atmosphere of the Nixon years.

After the trial, in July, 1972 — as investigative stories in the Charlotte Observer later disclosed — the Department of Justice paid $3,000 to each witness, and each was granted immunity from prosecution on the charges pending against him. The grant of immunity was approved by Assistant Attorney General Robert Mardian, now on trial on Watergate conspiracy charges. He also approved a Treasury Department "relocation" payment of $1,000 each to Hood and Washington.

But neither man has relocated. Each is on the streets today, Hood charged with a murder. A warrant is outstanding for Washington for attacking and threatening a businessman. But the "Charlotte Three" are still in prison, still protesting their innocence.

Last spring, Republican Governor James Holshouser Jr. refused to intervene. On Dec. 10, however, a hearing for post-conviction release was held before Judge Ervin. Defense Attorney James Ferguson II argued for a new trial on grounds that Walter Washington had not actually seen who had set the Lazy B fire, and the prosecutors had failed to tell that to the defense; that the federal government had made payments to the two witnesses after the trial, and had failed to tell that to the defense; and that the state had promised to terminate a 25-year probation to which Washington had previously been sentenced, and had failed to tell that to the defense.

Judge Ervin said he would rule about Jan. 25, after both sides file written briefs, as to whether all this warranted a new trial.

Meanwhile, the case of the "Charlotte Three" has become something of a cause for those who know about it. They believe it to be one more of those vengeful miscarriages of justice by which comfortable society attempted to label urban unrest, racial disorders, campus disturbances, and anti-war activity as the work of agitators and terrorists, rather than the result of economic and political injustices.

In "Judge Poem," T. J. Reddy recalled that Judge Sneyd "labels me tactician, conspirator, over-educated revolutionary beyond rehabilitation." To which in another of the poems collected in a slender volume by Random House, he has an answer perhaps more pertinent to most of us than to him: "It is first our ignorance of what oppresses us / That keeps our minds and bodies enslaved."

Capital Briefs

WASHINGTON — RECORD SPENDING: President Ford will break all spending records next year. At secret meetings, his budget experts have acknowledged that the deficit is likely to reach the all-time high of $35 billion in the President's next budget. An anticipated $112 billion military budget will run up the deficit. Ford has also failed to cut back the budget he inherited from ex-President Nixon. This is now expected to reach $310 billion, a $20 billion deficit, by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

OIL PROFITS: The giant oil companies are supposed to be fierce competitors. But when we cited the low corporate taxes some oil companies pay, Sun Oil rushed to the defense of Gulf and Mobil. Sun Oil distributed a letter declaring that its two rivals had paid 63.2% and 58.4% of their respective taxable incomes to the U.S. Treasury. The letter, referring to our column, added, "One of us just has to be wrong." True, Sun Oil is wrong. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., has just released a study based on confidential tax records. Although he used "Company A.B.C." etc., to identify the oil companies, we have broken his code. The Jackson figures prove that for five years, not only Gulf and Mobil but Standard of California, Texaco and Exxon, paid U.S. tax rates ranging from 1.32 to 5.56%.

The Athletic Pursuits Of American Presidents

PRESIDENT FORD
... so far, nothing broken ...

By BOB CONSIDINE
NEW YORK — Jerry Ford is the best athlete we've ever had in the White House, but his problem — and the country's — is that he won't stay there. If he had his druthers, he'd conduct all the affairs of state on an icy ski slope at Vail, Colorado.

His predecessors in this century were relatively sedentary. Theodore Roosevelt did a little boxing against Mike Donovan of the New York Athletic Club. William Howard Taft played golf at the Chevy Chase Club and annoyed fellow members by forbidding the following foursome to come within three holes of his own. (At 300 pounds, he felt he was too much of a target for long hitters.)

Woodrow Wilson took walks around his study, thinking; Warren Harding was an enthusiastic golfer. His good friend Ed McLean, owner of the Washington Post, built him a personal course on the McLean estate "Friendship," on the edge of Washington. Nine greens, 18 tees. It gave the President all the privacy he needed to play golf as he liked to play it: Every few holes a butler would appear with a silver tray of drinks.

Harding and McLean retained Leo Diegal, one of the best of the early 1920's, as a sort of house pro. And George Voight as the amateur-in-residence. An invitation to join that tight little club was considered a great honor, and it was. Harding was a keen admirer of Ring Lardner's sportswritings and on one occasion invited him (and Grantland Rice) to come down from New York and play a round at "Friendship." It was a royal command.

To his disappointment, however, Harding found Lardner the glumest man he had ever met: Ring could go for days without uttering a word.

This was one of those days. Finally, over a 19th-hole drink, Harding said to him, "Is there anything I can do for you?"

Ring spoke, at long last. "Yes," he said. "Make me ambassador to India." "India?" the President said, startled. "Why?" "Because my wife hates Great Neck," Lardner said solemnly.

Patterson of the New York Daily News installed for him in the White House. Shortly after that, they stopped speaking, but Roosevelt did not send the pool back. It meant a great deal to him, psychologically as well as physiologically. Gus, his rubber, would lower the stricken titan into it at neck level and Roosevelt would buoyantly walk across it — the only steps he could take without his leg braces and cane.

Harry Truman walked, waving happily to cab drivers who yelled to him, "Give 'em Hell, Harry!" Dwight David Eisenhower's dream as a West Point Cadet was to make the football team. But torn ligaments in a knee shunted him to the sidelines — as a cheer leader.

Ike was a helpless golf addict. He frequently wore his golf shoes in the Oval Office. He'd leave his big desk from time to time and walk through the French doors to the putting green just outside his office, to practice. The parquet flooring visible between the edge of the office rug and the great outdoors is still pocked with hundreds of little spike craters.

"He had it bad," John F. Kennedy remarked one day, gazing down at the wounded floor. He signed enviously. "I wish I could play," he said. JFK had a bum back from blocking a Japanese destroyer. His chief exercise after that was swimming.

LBJ rode a horse, but never in Washington. In Washington, he rode Congress. Richard Nixon learned to play golf rather late in life, and rather well at that. But he seemed uneasy on the links, as if somebody might catch him playing hooky. He drained FDR's pool, covered it and made it into the White House press room. He'd slip across the street to the Executive Office Building, sometimes in dead of night, to use the bowling alley that had been constructed for him. The only other game he played seems to have been Russian Roulette.

Now Ford. He swims, golfs, plays tennis, and looks fit enough to go back into the Michigan line. Somewhere along the line he became a torrid ski buff. So far he hasn't broken anything, but the actuarial figures indicate that he will, if he keeps on challenging the giant slaloms at 9,000 feet. Friends have pleaded with him to take up something less dangerous, like bullfighting.

Sounds Great, But . . .

The major facelift for O St. through the central business district proposed some days ago by the Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) sounds great — up to a point.

The first phase of a three-phase plan drawn up by local architects proposes ample landscaping of O St. between 9th and 16th along the sidewalk areas and the restructuring of the 13th and O intersection to reinforce its position as the crossroads of Lincoln. Vehicular traffic and on-street parking would be retained on O St. and north-south streets would remain open to through traffic during the initial phase. So far, so good.

The second and third phases sound great too, esthetically and recreationally and, in some respects, commercially, speaking. Sidewalk cafes, miniparks, fountains, open theatres, playgrounds and the like are envisioned on a pedestrian-oriented O St. closed to through traffic and bereft of on-street parking places. One's head swims at the thought of such a downtown metamorphosis.

However, we share Miller & Paine executive John Campbell's apprehension over a closed-off O St. Certainly, some other long-awaited improvements — such as the Centrum and the traffic-bearing bypass routes — will have to become realities before it is feasible to close off O St. to through traffic.

There are other plans in the works — making 13th St. through downtown a "prestige avenue" and the beautification of J St. from the County-City Building to the State Capitol — which if implemented will reduce further the number of on-street parking spaces in the downtown area and probably reduce further the total traffic carrying capacity of downtown streets.

The closing off of O St. without replacement traffic-bearing streets and without sufficient off-street parking will further complicate matters.

Downtown will asphyxiate if it does not first solve its traffic problems: how to move it and where to park it.

Treas. Office Draws Bad Marks

A report prepared by State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson's staff and released last week suggests that the operation of the Lancaster County treasurer's office is an accountant's nightmare.

Left and right hands literally do not know what the others are doing, it is alleged, and the same people who take in cash are responsible for keeping a record of it — a practice which the report suggests is contrary to good bookkeeping practices.

The volume of money processed through County Treasurer Frank Golden's office annually "would indicate the necessity for control systems, machine modernization and sound administrative control, responsive and responsible to the taxpayer as well as county management," the report states.

The auditors "urgently recommend" that a study be undertaken of office procedures.

A cash shortage in the motor vehicles

division discovered last September prompted the review by the state auditor's office.

The Star had hoped that the report could have been issued before the November election (in which Golden was re-elected) so that voters would have some basis on which to judge the candidates. But that is water over the dam, and it probably is just as well, because a report weighted heavily for or against (as it turned out, against) Golden's performance issued just prior to the election would not have given either candidate proper time to respond.

Some sort of response is expected of Golden now, however. The cash shortage and the auditors' report should be convincing enough evidence that all is not running smoothly in the county treasurer's office.

The next four "Golden Years" should be dedicated to running a considerably tighter ship.

Law And Vengeance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Another year, another Christmas, have passed and T. J. Reddy, James Grant and Charles Parker are still in prison near here. Another hearing has been held. A judge — Sam J. Ervin III, son of the retiring senator — is weighing the evidence again. So the drama of the "Charlotte Three" drags on. As Reddy put it in one of the 400 poems he has written in prison:

Like fish
Out of breath
In air
I keep my nose
Water here.

T. J. Reddy, 28, black, writer and artist, was co-editor of the Arts Magazine at the University of North Carolina, later director of an anti-poverty center in Charlotte, a writer for the Charlotte Observer, an activist and counselor among his people. James Grant of Connecticut abandoned a Ph.D. in chemistry to become an organizer and volunteer worker among southern blacks. Charles Parker was T. J. Reddy's assistant at the Charlotte anti-poverty center.

What are three such men doing in prison on arson charges — Reddy for 20 years, Grant for 25 and Parker for 10? The story begins in 1970 when two blacks with lengthy criminal records, Walter D. Washington and Theodore A. Hood, were arrested on federal charges of manufacturing and possessing dynamite during a racial disturbance in Oxford, N.C., in May, 1970. They jumped bail and were re-arrested, and the federal government also brought charges against James Grant and Ben Chavis, another black activist, for allegedly aiding and abetting the bail jump.

In July, 1971, while still in jail and unable to raise bond, Hood and Washington, apparently made aware of the prosecutors' interest in T. J. Reddy, James Grant and Charles Parker, signed a statement alleging that the three had burned the Lazy B stables near Charlotte three years earlier. They denied it, but were charged with arson, arrested and placed under heavy bond. No further charges were brought against Hood and Washington, although they said they had participated in the burning of the stables.

Federal authorities turned the matter over to the State of North Carolina, which tried the "Charlotte Three" in 1972, terming them "political terrorists." But Walter Washington and Theodore Hood were the only prosecution witnesses. The state argued that Reddy and Parker once had been denied riding privileges at the Lazy B, and later had returned to burn it down, with 15 horses dying in the blaze. A jury of 11 whites and one black found them guilty, and Judge Frank Snepp levied sentences that were unusually harsh even by the standards of the law-and-order atmosphere of the Nixon years.

After the trial, in July, 1972 — as investigative stories in the Charlotte Observer later disclosed — the Department of Justice paid $3,000 to each witness, and each was granted immunity from prosecution on the charges pending against him. The grant of immunity was approved by Assistant Attorney General Robert Mardian, now on trial on Watergate conspiracy charges. He also approved a Treasury Department "relocation" payment of $1,000 each to Hood and Washington.

But neither man has relocated. Each is on the streets today, Hood charged with a murder. A warrant is outstanding for Washington for attacking and threatening a businessman. But the "Charlotte Three" are still in prison, still protesting their innocence.

Last spring, Republican Governor James Holshouser Jr. refused to intervene. On Dec. 10, however, a hearing for post-conviction release was held before Judge Ervin. Defense Attorney James Ferguson II argued for a new trial on grounds that Walter Washington had not actually seen who had set the Lazy B fire, and the prosecutors had failed to tell that to the defense; that the federal government had made payments to the two witnesses after the trial, and had failed to tell that to the defense; and that the state had promised to terminate a 25-year probation to which Washington had previously been sentenced, and had failed to tell that to the defense.

Judge Ervin said he would rule about Jan. 25, after both sides file written briefs, as to whether all this warranted a new trial.

Meanwhile, the case of the "Charlotte Three" has become something of a cause for those who know about it. They believe it to be one more of those vengeful miscarriages of justice by which comfortable society attempted to label urban unrest, racial disorders, campus disturbances, and anti-war activity as the work of agitators and terrorists, rather than the result of economic and political injustices.

In "Judge Poem," T. J. Reddy recalled that Judge Snepp "labels me tactician, conspirator, over-educated revolutionary beyond rehabilitation." To which in another of the poems collected in a slender volume by Random House, he has an answer perhaps more pertinent to most of us than his own: "It is first our ignorance of what oppresses us / That keeps our minds and bodies enslaved."

WASHINGTON — RECORD SPENDING: President Ford will break all spending records next year. At secret meetings, his budget experts have acknowledged that the deficit is likely to reach the all-time high of $35 billion in the President's next budget. An anticipated $112 billion military budget will run up the deficit. Ford has also failed to cut back the budget he inherited from ex-President Nixon. This is now expected to reach $310 billion, a $20 billion deficit, by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

OIL PROFITS: The giant oil companies are supposed to be fierce competitors. But when we cited the low corporate taxes some oil companies pay, Sun Oil rushed to the defense of Gulf and Mobil. Sun Oil distributed a letter declaring that its two rivals had paid 63.2% and 58.4% of their respective taxable incomes to the U.S. Treasury. The letter, referring to our column, added, "One of us just has to be wrong." True. Sun Oil is wrong. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., has just released a study based on confidential tax records. Although he used "Company A.B.C." etc., to identify the oil companies, we have broken his code. The Jackson figures prove that for five years, not only Gulf and Mobil but Standard of California, Texaco and Exxon, paid U.S. tax rates ranging from 1.32 to 5.56%.

The Athletic Pursuits Of American Presidents

PRESIDENT FORD
... so far, nothing broken ...

By BOB CONSIDINE
NEW YORK — Jerry Ford is the best athlete we've ever had in the White House, but his problem — and the country's — is that he won't stay there. If he had his druthers, he'd conduct all the affairs of state on an icy ski slope at Vail, Colorado.

His predecessors in this century were relatively sedentary. Theodore Roosevelt did a little boxing against Mike Donovan of the New York Athletic Club. William Howard Taft played golf at the Chevy Chase Club and annoyed fellow members by forbidding the following foursome to come within three holes of his own. Space Is Short . . . NU Plant Breeding Work Done In Old Horse Barn

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Dr. Elverne C. Conard, an associate professor of agronomy at the Institute of Agriculture, has been using an upstairs room in the old horse barn as a working space in his plant-breeding work.

While this does save money and space and shows how short of space the plant science people at the Agriculture College at the University of Nebraska are, it also creates a real staffing problem.

Conard is retiring next year and officials are concerned about replacing him. Where can they find a young scientist who will be willing to work in an attic?

Crowding Typical
Conard's use of the old horse barn attic is typical of the crowding that plant science people have experienced, and illustrates why some 38 farm groups are uniting in an effort to convince the Legislature that new larger facilities are needed.

The problem stems from the expanded interest in plant science by students and from the growing needs of farmers to find answers for complicated plant growth problems, the use of pesticides on crops and new plant diseases.

The proposal includes a laboratory classroom building to be integrated with Keim Hall which would accommodate agronomy, plant pathology and horticulture departments on the East Campus in Lincoln.

A greenhouse-headhouse complex would replace badly deteriorated greenhouses which are deemed beyond repair. Keim Hall would be remodeled somewhat but would remain much the way it is today.

Small Greenhouse
A small greenhouse to give students a closer look at plant growth than is possible today is included.

The aging Plant Industry Building would be used by the department of entomology and the department of forestry which would expand into space vacated when the pathologists and horticulture people move into the proposed new complex.

If the new building is approved and built, the whole plant program will be back in one area. Presently some plant experts are using crude laboratory space in an old maintenance shop, two former poultry houses, Keim Hall, the Plant Industry Building and the old horse barn.

Summer-only research on many plant problems could be moved indoors for year-round study under controlled conditions.

Better Work
Expanded space should provide better laboratory work, better teaching and more office space for scientists who are often jammed two or more into small offices that were designed for one.

Whether the farm coalition of 38 organizations will hold together to complete the project during the legislative battles over the budget this winter remains to be seen, but Dr. Don Hanway, chairman of the department of agronomy, is hopeful.

A smaller group of farm organizations did succeed in convincing the Legislature that new facilities for animal science were needed last year.

'LABORATORY' . . . is actually an old hay storage area dating from early 30s.

Central City Man To Be Judge
Palmer — Matt Billesbach, a Central City businessman, has been appointed to a two-year term as associate county judge, County Judge Gary Hatfield said. Billesbach will succeed Associate County Judge Harold Parker on Jan. 1, who is retiring.

Health Department Director Sought
McCook — The newly-formed Red Willow County Health Board is looking for a director to head the county health department. Initial plans call for the hiring of three persons to man the department — a director, a field nurse and a clerk.

Richardson Home Winterizing Planned
Falls City — Richardson County residents who lack the finances to sufficiently winterize their homes now qualify for aid from Southeast Nebraska Community Action's Operation Winterize project, according to SeNCA community services director Ann Williams. The project will last from January to March.

Youth Robbery Wave Boosts Omaha Crime

Omaha (AP) — Almost three robberies are committed in Omaha every 24 hours and officials say there is a good chance the robber will be a teen-ager.

Figures show that two of three persons who were sent to court on robbery charges during the first nine months of this year were under the age of 20.

Law officers say there's a 47 per cent greater chance that a person was robbed during the first nine months of this year than during a like period last year.

The FBI uniform crime report showed Omaha robberies the fastest growing major crime during the study period — from 551 to 808.

Ken Johnson, chief crime analyst for the Omaha Police Department, said that 252 per-

There is more wheat planted than there was a year ago. This has once again led the government to predict there will be a tremendous crop in 1975.

I doubt that farmers will spend a fortune on fertilizer for wheat if prices dip, which could cause the yield to dip as well.

Weather will still play a major role in the size of the crop we get. If we begin to harvest a good crop in the South, the government will move quickly to get larger amounts of wheat into international food programs so that farmers will be interested in planting wheat in the summer of '75.

One thing clear is that with more wheat planted there are fewer acres available for growing feed grains.

A drop in cotton acreage in the South could affect this somewhat, but sugarbeet

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

I get downright irritated about the visions some of our religious leaders have of agriculture and farmers.

I received a copy of an article suggesting that since food was "a gift of God," farmers had no right to withhold it from those who lacked the means to pay for it.

The monks who produced their own food on monastery ground in years past had a whole lot more realistic view of how food is produced than the religious leaders we have today.

The truth is man must do a good deal of tinkering with Mother Nature before food becomes readily available in sufficient quantities to support a population large enough to establish a village — much less today's cities.

Food is no less a gift of God than is iron ore, copper ore, gold ore, oil, pure water and a host of other things needed by people today.

People who expect farmers to donate their crops and livestock to the starving seem to ignore the sad fact that fertilizer at 300 bucks a ton, tractors at $30,000 each and fuel at twice last year's cost have to be paid for from the sale of the food the farmer produced.

Farmers have been generous donors to CROP and other food and fund drives, but this is a very limited answer to the world's food shortages. The real answer lies in teaching the hungry how to feed themselves.

Very few churches can run without money and the same thing is true of farms. Somehow the cost of production must be met or the whole operation folds up and ceases to produce.

The world can use a lot of resources that are now wasted as animal feed.

A good example of what ought to be done is the new Swiss development aid project in Ecuador which is going to convert 120 tons of bananas daily into a meal for use in livestock feed.

Bananas have been used to feed hogs for years and are in fact reasonably close to an ideal ration for porkers, but bananas spoil if not consumed promptly after harvest. Some means needed to be found to preserve this resource.

There are a lot of things going to waste that could be processed into animal food. The animals can then convert these otherwise waste materials into high value protein food for humans. Things like meat, milk and eggs, with side products of feathers for pillows, leather for shoes and wool for clothing.

The idea that we should get rid of animals as a source of food comes from people who know little about how food is actually produced. Unfortunately their ignorance hasn't kept them from attracting attention from the news media.

Agriculture has a lot of problems, but there are some things that might have happened to make things even worse than they are.

For example, think how bad things would be if the congressmen who refuse to aid dairymen because cows give milk and milk funds are bad politics really knew about all the animals that do give milk.

Beef cows provide milk for their calves, sows give milk for their pigs and sheep give milk for lambs. And some is used for cheese in nations around the world.

Under some of the political concepts based on fear of milk, even the white mouse industry would be in deep trouble.

The only safe thing for a milk fund-conscious congressman to do is to go on a straight vegetarian diet.

It might be politically appropriate to come out with a bill to eradicate the milk weed but the congressman may have to switch from egg nog to egg in his beer.

This foolishness about the Platte being navigable could have some advantages if we worked it right.

For example we could establish some minimum standards for water depth . . . force the Army Corps of Engineers to turn the river into a deep canal with locks that would allow us to ship grain out of Nebraska via large river barges direct to the port of New Orleans.

If we could arrange for a ditch big enough for ocean going ships, connect it with the Gulf of Mexico or with the Great Lakes and have it run the length of the state we could tell the railroads what they could do with their boxcar shortage in blunt, unprintable terms.

Dredging the river would be a never-ending job for lots of people and machines, produce enough sand to take care of all our landfill problems and bring on the construction of a whole new set of grain elevators, river warehouses, riverboats and related industries.

If we propose enough "improvements" they might forget the whole silly business.

Canned Beer Prices Hiked 15c For Case

Omaha (AP) — The price of canned beer is going up again, the second rise in the last six months.

Omaha beer wholesalers and retailers have confirmed that the national breweries have passed the word the price of beer in the can will climb on Tuesday.

A spokesman for one wholesale distributor said he had been notified of about a 15 cent raise for a 24-can case of beer. The cost of a case was raised 30 cents last June.

The latest increase will be passed on to the retailers, but it was not known immediately how much more the consumer will pay for a can of beer.

Breweries cite the increased cost for hops, grain and cans as reasons for the hikes.

A spokesman said the increase will primarily affect carry-outs, such as six-pack sales, which constitute about 70 per cent of the beer business.

Sugarless Recipes Saved From WWII

To the young marrieds and parents of 1974, current threats of food shortages and rationing is a new experience. But to those who were raising families in the days of World War II, these two words were a reality and, as always, people learned to adjust. However, "it was a real trial to try to make things like cakes and cookies for my young children without using sugar," said Mrs. Miles Beran of Odell. Mrs. Beran and her husband were "just starting out" on their farm northwest of Odell with two of their three children, Judy and Glen, who were then 2 and 6. "We had rationing coupons then and the number you received depended on how many people you had in the family," she explained. "You got a certain number of pounds per person per month. "And even this sugar you couldn't use for baking if you wanted to do canning.

"Also, at that time, there weren't too many sugar substitutes, except saccharin," she said, "which I didn't like to use. If you used too much, it would taste bitter."

So, other sweetener alternatives for Mrs. Beran and other homemakers of that era were honey, molasses and sorghums to which recipes were adjusted.

According to Mrs. Beran, even today, with the price of sugar so high, she prefers to save most of her sugar for canning, which she does in large volume.

This, in addition to the publicity on sugar, caused her recently to dig out the many sugarless recipes she had saved from World War II and had pasted in a cookbook which had belonged to her mother.

Judging from the fact that cooking is one of her hobbies and since she has collected a library of over 50 cookbooks, the recipes listed below are bound to be delicious

Sugarless Orange Cake
(One of the best sugarless cakes you'll ever taste," said Mrs. Beran.)
2 1/4 c. sifted cake flour
2 1/4 t. baking powder
1/4 t. salt
1/2 c. shortening
2 t. grated orange rind
1 c. light corn syrup
2 eggs
1/2 c. orange juice
Sift flour before measuring, then sift three times with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening with orange rind. Add syrup very gradually by tablespoons at first beating hard after each addition to keep the mixture thick. Add about a fourth of the flour. Beat again until smooth. Add unbeaten eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds, alternating with the orange juice, beating well after each addition. Bake in two greased eight inch pans which have been lined with waxed paper in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) thirty min. or bake in a nine inch square pan in moderate oven forty min. Frost with any favorite frosting or with:

Sugarless Frosting
2 egg whites
1 1/2 c. light corn syrup
1/4 t. salt
2 T. orange juice
1/2 t. grated orange rind
Combine unbeaten egg whites, corn syrup and salt in top of double boiler and beat with rotary beater until well mixed. Set pan over rapidly boiling water and beat constantly while it cooks. Cook just seven minutes or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove pan from boiling water. Add orange juice and peel and beat until thick enough to spread.

Peanut Butter Drop Cookies
3/4 c. sifted white flour
1/2 t. baking soda
1 1/2 t. baking powder
1/2 t. salt
1 1/2 c. graham or whole wheat flour
1/2 c. shortening
1/2 c. shortening
1/2 c. peanut butter
1 c. dark corn syrup
1/4 c. sugar
1 egg
1 c. raisins or chopped dates
Sift white flour with soda, baking powder and salt, mix with whole wheat or graham flour. Cream shortening and peanut butter together, add syrup and sugar and cream until fluffy. Beat in egg. Add sifted dry ingredients and raisins and mix well. Drop by teaspoon onto ungreased baking sheet and bake in 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 min. depending on size. Makes 3 to 4 dozen.

Sugarless White Cake
1/2 c. shortening
1 c. white syrup
1/2 c. milk
2 c. plus 1 tablespoon cake flour
1 1/2 t. vanilla
2 1/4 t. baking powder
1/4 t. salt
4 egg whites
Cream shortening well and gradually add syrup. Sift four and measure, and add all other dry ingredients, and sift four times. Add alternately with milk. Fold in vanilla and stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in two 8-inch layers at 375 degrees F. about 30 min.

Sugarless Brownies
1/2 c. shortening
1 c. dark syrup
2 heaping T. cocoa
3/4 c. flour (sifted)
1/2 t. baking powder
1/4 t. salt
2 well beaten eggs
3/4 c. nutmeats
1/2 t. vanilla
Cream shortening until fluffy, add syrup and beat. Add cocoa and mix well. Add dry ingredients alternately with beaten eggs. Then add the vanilla and nuts, pour in a shallow greased baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 20 min.

Victory Angel Food Cake
("Use much less sugar, the cake is still angel cake," Mrs. Beran commented.)
3/4 c. white syrup
1 c. egg whites
1 t. cream of tartar
1/4 t. salt
3/4 t. almond flavoring
1 cup sifted cake flour
1/2 cup sugar
Boil the syrup until it forms a soft ball when tested in cold water. Beat egg whites until frothy, then add cream of tartar and salt. Continue beating until stiff but not dry. Add hot syrup a little at a time, beating well after each addition. Add flavoring. Sift together sifted cake flour and sugar. Fold into egg whites, and blend lightly. Bake in ungreased angel food pan for 60 min. as follows: First 15 min., 320 degrees F., then 45 min. at 300 degrees F. When baked, remove from oven and invert pan for 1 hour before removing cake from pan.

Oatmeal Cookies
3/4 c. shortening
1/4 c. sugar
2 eggs
1 c. molasses
1/3 c. milk
2 t. baking powder
1/4 t. soda
1/4 t. salt
1 t. cinnamon
3 c. rolled oats
1 c. raisins
Mix and bake as drop cookies on moderate oven.

Bread Sculpture Recipe

As more and more people are getting back to the basics of life by planting gardens, canning foods, baking breads and sewing and designing their own clothes, crafts also have increased in popularity.

Among these novelty craft ideas is that of making baskets and ornaments of bread, which prompted the November Bread Fair of the Nebraska Art Association.

The following recipe for these who would like to try bread sculptures is provided by the Wheat Division of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

2 1/2 c. warm water
2 pkg. active dry yeast
1 Tbsp. sugar
1 Tbsp. salt
2 Tbsp. margarine, soft
6 1/2 to 7 1/2 c. unsifted flour
1 egg, beaten
1 Tbsp. milk

Measure warm water into a large warm bowl. Sprinkle in dry yeast; stir until dissolved. Add sugar, salt, margarine and 3 cups flour, beat until smooth. Add enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board, knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover, let rise in warm place free from draft, until double in bulk about 1 hour.

Punch down dough. Roll two thirds of the dough out on floured board to a rectangle about 12 by 14" and 1/4" to 1/2" thick. Save remaining dough for handle. Using a pizza cutter, cut six strips 13" long, four 10" long and four 8" long, all about 3/4" wide. These strips will fit a bowl 7" to 8" in diameter. If your bowl is smaller or larger, measure the inverted bowl from rim to rim and use that measurement for determining the length of the 3 center strips. Cut others proportionately shorter.

Place a piece of foil 14" long on a flat surface. Place one 13" strip horizontally in the center. Place two more strips horizontally above and below the first strip, keeping about 1/2" between them. Place a 10" strip on each side of the 13" strips; do the same for the two 8" strips, keeping all horizontal.

Vertically weave one of the remaining 13" strips through the center of those on the foil. Weave remaining strips in same length sequence and spacing as the horizontal pattern.

Invert ovenproof bowl and pull lattice on foil gently over bowl till centered. Tuck excess foil inside bowl. Trim overhanging strips even with bottom edge of bowl, place on greased baking sheet. Roll out the remaining one third of dough to 1/2" thickness. Using pizza cutter cut two strips about 3/4" wide and as long as the circumference of your bowl. Twist the two strips together to make a rope. Place around the bottom edge of the bowl and seal well. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled, about 20 minutes. Brush entire form with the mixture of beaten egg and milk. Bake at 375 degrees 25 min. or until golden brown. Cool well before removing bowl and foil.

After the basket has cooled and the bowl removed, the handle may be formed. Cut two strips of dough about 3/4" wide and long enough to extend over the inverted bowl from one side to the other. Twist the two strips together and place over well-greased bowl. Cover and let rise until doubled. Brush with beaten egg. Bake in 375 degree oven for 15 min. Cool on wire rack. Handle may be fastened to the basket with toothpicks or strong glue.

For an added touch tie ribbon around the handle or line the basket with a favorite piece of material.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplante

San Francisco — The year ends. Have not accomplished great things but survived, losing only a few branches in the winds. That is no easy thing, Mate.

When I was going to Saturday afternoon movies, we learned to face our opponents with bare fists. Smack! Take that you varmint!

Now my smallest boy sneaks up behind me. Pow! He gives me a karate chop on the neck. Ouch!

He learns this on TV. If he gets me while I have the coffee cup at my lips. It is a real winner. Splash!

Have not made any resolutions

yet. I may not make any at all. Resolutions are like Christmas toys. The batteries run down.

I may make some resolutions for other people.

I resolve that boys who give me a karate chop when I am having coffee will get their bottoms smacked.

Beer is up in merry England's malty pubs. About tuppence a pint, lads. There will be cries against the minister who thought that one up. "Ur! the blighter out!"

It will bring new tax money. Increase the profits of the brewers. Politicians have a soft spot for brewers. So many have been elevated to titles that they are known as "the beerge."

The Pilgrim Fathers founded Plymouth, Mass., because they were out of beer. Did you know that? It's in the log of the Mayflower.

"For we could not now take time for further search or consideration, our victuals being much spent, especially our beer."

If they'd had a few more cases aboard, they'd have kept on going to Miami Beach.

Cold beer and warm resolutions. That's the life, coppers. In Sydney Australia — and there's a cheery, beery town, mate! — the Dental Association has been pushing for putting fluoride in the water.

Fluoride is supposed to be good for your teeth. But many people are against it.

Well, the Dental Association wanted to prove you could not tell the difference between plain water and the fluoride water. So they set up two bottles, Unmarked. They invited the public to try them.

Everybody who tried the fluoride water asked for a second glass.

Some joker had spiked it with Scotch whiskey. Always a lot of fun up at King's Cross.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Monday

The New Year: Arles will make changes. Taurus domestic lifestyle will be adjusted. Gemini will discern "inner truth." Cancer will organize. Leo will finish a cycle. Virgo will start anew. Libra will teach and learn. Scorpio will diversify and enlarge. Sagittarius will remodel and get facts and files in order. Capricorn will analyze, marry, intensify relationships and communicate. Aquarius will reconcile. Pisces will find inner peace.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Practical affairs dominate but you also feel surge of creativity. You are getting ready to be more independent original. Key now is to build on solid base. Put fantasy in place. Don't confuse issues. You'll get proverbial "second chance."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on teaching and learning — in connection with close neighbors, relatives. Your intuitive intellect works overtime. You seem to sense something of importance is to occur. Trust yourself!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): For best money results, be versatile. Key now is to experiment. Make ideas work. You may not be aware of what is occurring behind scenes. Whatever, cycle favors you and there is no need for doubts, fears.

VIRO (June 21-July 21): Friends, reconciliation, closer family ties — these are spotlighted. Diplomacy is important. Don't attempt to force issues, views. You can win your way in a pleasant, easygoing manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discern — be aware of truth versus wishful thinking. Perfect routines, techniques. Refuse second-best — you have right to insist on quality. You are able now to climb ladder, to achieve position you desire.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What seemed out-of-reach becomes more available. Idealistic concepts can be put to practical use. You have right to insist on a point, to organize and to profit from creative abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What remains high is likely to be solved. You get rid of burden. You also find that one you aided in past is willing to return the favor. Check receipts. There could be a mustache in addition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis is on decision made in conjunction with partner, make Assert yourself in independent manner. Minus arrogance. One you thought lacked interest will demonstrate just the opposite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Basic issues dominate. Services, the way to streamline operations — these deserve paramount consideration. Another Aquarian figure prominently. Shake up status quo — refuse to put up with unnecessary inconvenience.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pressures are relieved. You have more freedom. Member of opposite sex plays important role. Travel and other plans are discussed. Young persons, save yourselves, could make "outrageous" statements. Maintain balance, dignity!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are attractive, have sense of humor, and fond of travel, will start new project in 1975 and July will be your most significant month. Sagittarius, Gemini persons play important roles in your life. You are active, artistic, versatile and tend to scatter your forces. You possess an abundance of charm, have grand personality and are noted for puncturing stuffed shirts. The old year drips as you raise a toast to your lips.

Make only one New Year's resolution this year, but stick with it... Last quarter of the moon Jan. 4... Some say it's bad luck if you don't take your Christmas greens down now... Average length of days for week, 9 hours, 7 minutes... Days are starting to lengthen now... Car crossed Sahara Desert in 3 days vs. camel in 9 days, Jan. 4, 1924... Ring out old year, ring in new; ring out false, and ring in true.

Old Farmer's Riddle: What changes a pear into a pearl? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: Why is the name "tumbler" applied to an eight-ounce, straight-sided, flat-bottomed drinking glass? G.C., Boston.

There are two traditions about this. One claims that originally the drinking cup or glass was made with a round bottom and had to be held to prevent it from capsizing. When a drinker had arrived at the point where he couldn't do this, he was expected to call it a day. The other claims that the flat-bottomed glass was designed to help the unsteady lad, or "tumbler."

Home Hints: Broken window glass can be removed easily by first putting soft soap on the putty. In a few hours the putty will have softened and can be removed with an ordinary knife... Riddle answer: The letter "L".

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECASTS

Central Great Plains: Cold snap and flurries at first, then mostly clear and very cold; end of week sunny and considerably milder.

Pittsburgh, Minnesota To Super Bowl

Steelers Stun Raiders, 24-13

Vikings Stop Rams, 14-10

OAKLAND (AP) — Art Rooney, one of the grand old men of pro football, stood in the chilly Oakland Coliseum, as expressionless as ever. After 42 years, he finally had a championship team.

And how did he plan to celebrate?

"The same way as I've celebrated losing," Rooney said with just a hint of a twinkle in his eyes. "In the old days, when we celebrated, we always had a big time. But now... well, I took the pledge about 15 years ago."

Rooney, and the entire city of Pittsburgh, have plenty to celebrate. Their Steelers are in their first National Football League championship, an entry in Super Bowl IX following their 24-13 victory Sunday over the favored Oakland Raiders in the American Conference title game. Now, only one more barrier to the ultimate remains—the Minnesota Vikings.

The defending National Conference champions, 24-7 losers a year ago to Miami in Super Bowl VIII, bought a return ticket by defeating the Los Angeles Rams 14-10 earlier Sunday.

"I don't know anything about Minnesota," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "You really can't tell anything on television. I guess we'll sort of have to play it by ear for now. But at the moment, we've just got a holiday coming up."

Everybody figured the Super Bowl matchup was going to be a contest of flashy arms—Fran Tarkenton's for Minnesota and Kenny Stabler's for Oakland. But in the end, it was Stabler's left arm and Jack Ham's opportunistic hands that broke the Raiders' backs in this AFC game and sent the Steelers toward New Orleans for their Jan. 12 showdown with the Vikings.

Stabler, who had thrown four touchdowns a week ago in overhauling the defending Super Bowl-champion Dolphins 20-26, went to the well once again this time around. And it cost him dearly.

He had electrified the Coliseum crowd of 53,515 with a 39-yard scoring bomb to Cliff Branch, putting the Raiders ahead 10-0 early in the third period.

But back came the Steelers with one of their relentless ground assaults, capped by Franco Harris' explosive eighty-yard run on the first play of the fourth quarter. That tied it up once more, and Stabler immediately set about trying to untie it.

But his short dump pass to Charlie Smith was intercepted by Ham at the Oakland 34, and Pittsburgh's dynamic line-backer stutter-stepped the ball 25 yards to the Oakland nine. Three plays later, Terry Bradshaw faded back and found Lynn Swann wide open decenter in the end zone. His sixty-yard bullet to the rookie wide receiver, leaping behind defensive back Skip Thomas, untied it for the Steelers and put them ahead for good.

"It was just a man-to-man coverage," Ham said of the turning-point interception. "You can ask Ken about that, but I don't think it was a very good throw. He tried to dump it off to Smith and I had him pretty well covered."

Stabler was asked about the play and the game, but he was unattractive in defeat. "I've been nice to you guys' all year, but now I have nothing to say," he said. And then, to emphasize his mood, he repeated over and over again: "I have nothing to say, nothing to say."

Stabler was, in fact, virtually all of Oakland's offense. He completed 19 of 36 passes for 271 yards, while the Raiders could manage a mere 29 on the ground in 21 carries, less than 1½ yards per rush. Branch caught nine of Stabler's passes, a record for a conference championship game, winding up with 186 yards.

The Steelers, meanwhile, had balance.

Franco Harris ground out 111 yards, scoring not only the tying touchdown but the Steeler's final one on a 21-yard burst with a minute to go shortly after Stabler had thrown his third and final interception.

It was rare when the Raiders slowed down Harris' bull-like charges. But when they did, Bradshaw had only to hand off to his other running back, Rocky Bleier. Coming off the mark with lightning quickness, Bleier added 98 yards to Pittsburgh's 224-yard rushing total.

Bradshaw, unlike Stabler, chose his passes with care, throwing only 17 times and completing eight for 95 yards.

The first mistake in the game was Pittsburgh's, and it gave Oakland its first points.

Lynn Swann fumbled a punt, Harold Hart recovered for the Raiders on the Pittsburgh 41-yard line, and Oakland took a 3-0 lead on George Blanda's 40-yard field goal less than five minutes into the game.

But the Steelers came back to tie it with 5:26 gone in the second period on a field goal of 23 yards by Roy Gerela, who had missed a 20-yard shot late in the first quarter.

In the second half, Stabler woke up the Raiders' offense with four successive completions—for 8 yards to Fred Biletnikoff, 20 to Branch, 10 more to Biletnikoff and then the 38 to Branch that put Oakland on top 10-3.

Then came what most of the players on both sides thought was the turning point, a 61-yard, eight-play march by Pittsburgh to tie it up again.

"Our offense came right back, moved right down the field and scored a touchdown, and we were right back in the game," said Ham. "That's when I think we got our momentum really geared up."

"After that touchdown pass we knew we had to have some offense ourselves," added Noll. "And we had it. Our offensive line probably played the best it has all year. That drive we had right after that was the turning point for us. When we went the length of the field and scored right after they had, we knew we could control the game."

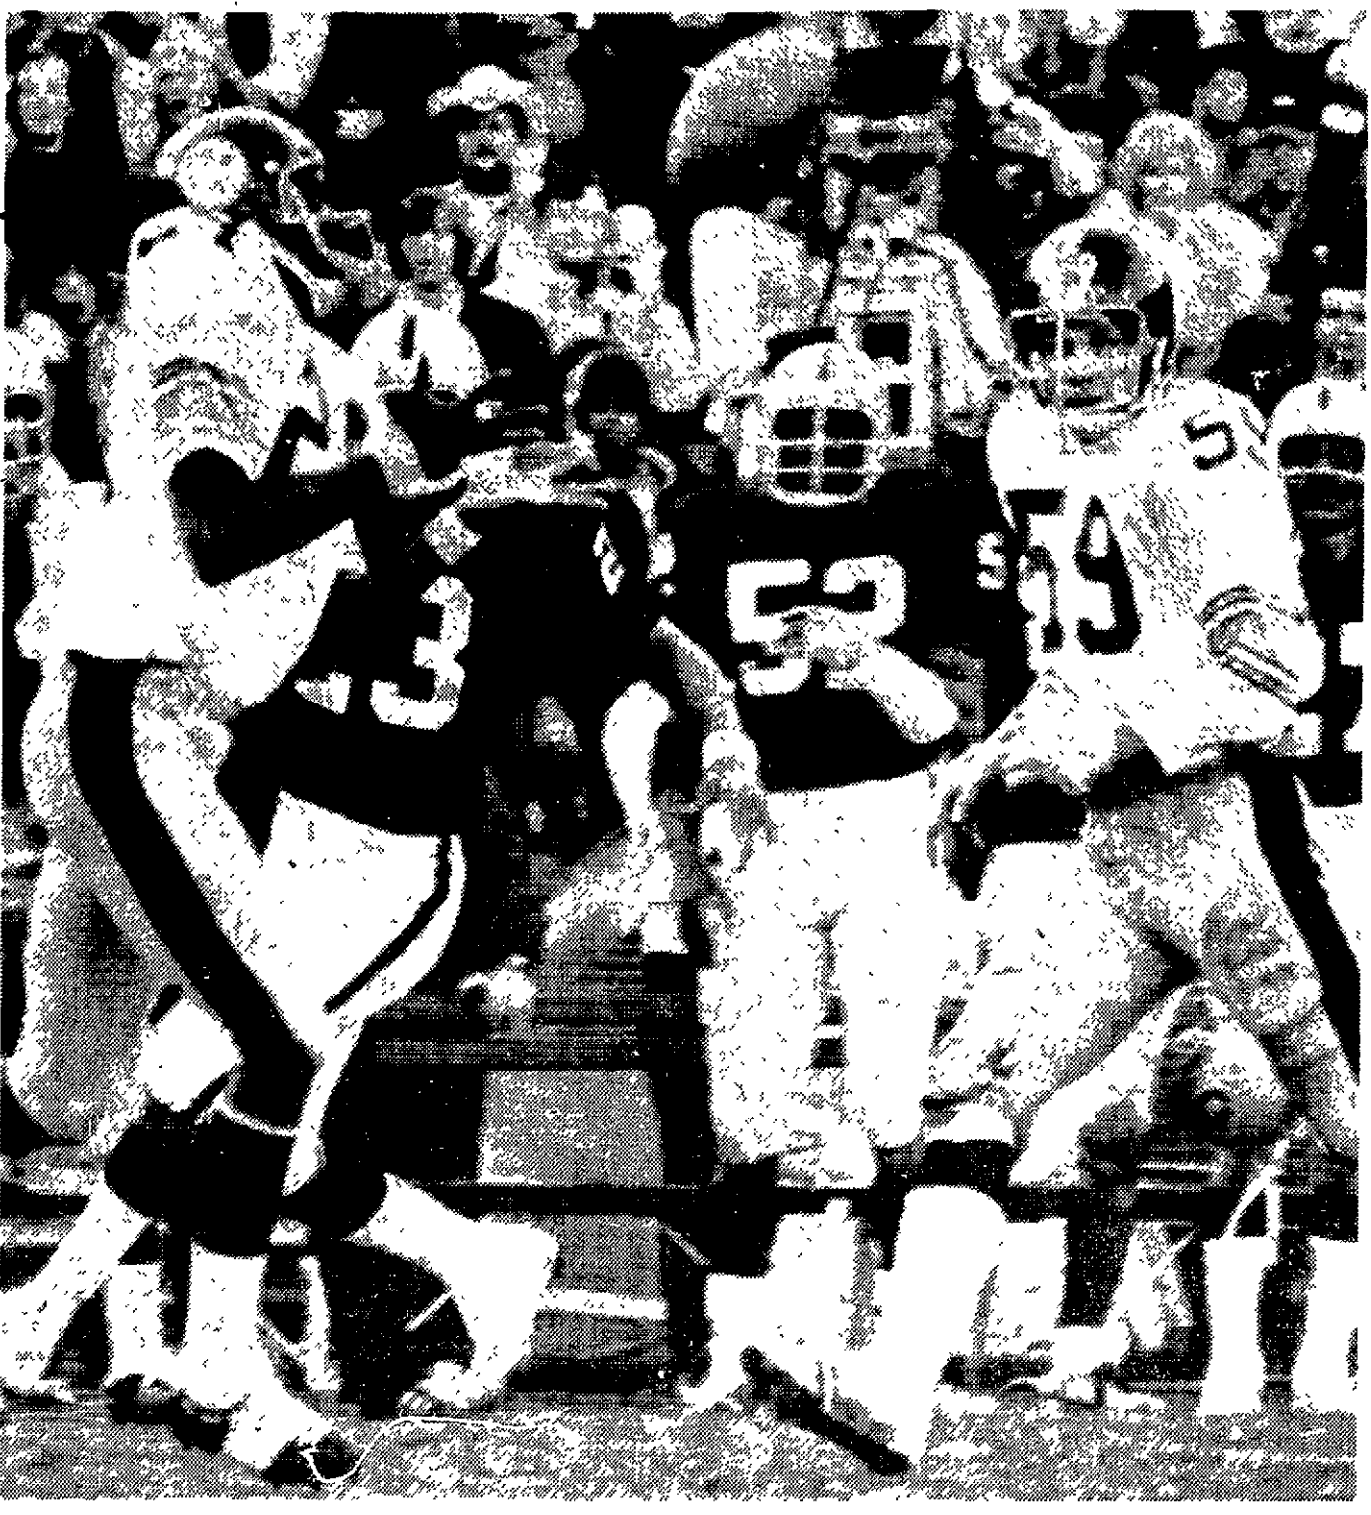

"Terry called a masterful game, and controlled the football," Noll added. "Even when we made mistakes, nobody was being discouraged. The guys were patting one another on the back at halftime, and they didn't lose their poise. They just hung in there."

After Swann's touchdown catch, the Raiders once again threatened to ride Stabler's arm to glory.

Kansas City, Mo. — Which team can recover quickest from a loss — Nebraska or Kansas State?

"Both have the same kind of teams that play hard and will bounce back regardless of the outcome of the last game," said Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano. "We're both young teams."

Nebraska and Kansas State meet at 3 p.m. here Monday at Kemper Arena in the third place game of the 29th annual Big Eight Preseason Basketball Tournament. Both squads, however, have to be, "down" after losses in Saturday's semifinals.

The losses were ever so contrasting, yet both teams obviously felt they should be meeting at 9 p.m. for the title.

Nebraska played undoubtedly its finest game all season, yet lost in the final 12 seconds to Kansas, 63-62; after leading by 125 points early in the second half.

Kansas State, meanwhile, collapsed in the second half against Iowa State, in losing decisively, 82-64. Still, Cipriano is worried about the Wildcats after watching them tip Missouri, 84-67, in an opening-round test on Friday.

"After their first game, I felt they were heads and shoulders above all the other teams," Cipriano said. "They had more quickness than anyone in the conference. They had an excellent fast break... great outside shooting, passing and defense. But they lack a big man for inside scoring punch."

"In the second game, they didn't have the hot shooting hand," he continued. "After that loss, they're a completely different club. K-State is still a smooth team with fine team play and they're strong defensively."

K-State, now 6-3, features superb guard play from 6-1 freshman Mike Evans and Chuckie Williams. Evans stunned Missouri with a 13 of 14 field goal performance while Williams hit 12 points in the Iowa State disaster.

"Evans is one of the finest guards I've seen for a freshman," Cipriano praised. "Williams is a real fine guard."

Reflecting on the Kansas defeat, Cipriano praised 6-7 sophomore Bob Siegel, who started against KU.

Osborne, Dickey Agree With Ara

New Orleans, La. — Nebraska coach Tom Osborne and his Florida counterpart Doug Dickey can readily understand the position Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian found himself in when he recently resigned and both agree that if they ever are similarly situated they, too, will quit the game.

Both of them, like Parseghian, admit a lot of the pressures of coaching are self-inflicted, but both say if you listen to critics you'll quickly lose your sanity.

"Obviously, even when you're undefeated, if you listen to the right people you can get kinda discouraged if you didn't win all 11 games by enough points," Osborne said. "In Nebraska an 8-3 record is not an overwhelming season. Maybe in ten years it will be, but following our national championship seasons everyone wants to compare our teams now with them."

He noted that the Cornhuskers play in a good conference and play seven good teams from that league (Big Eight). "I think a great many people in Nebraska feel like every game but the Oklahoma game should be an automatic win for us," he said. "It really isn't that way because there are too many good football players in the conference."

Osborne explained the only way he knows to keep his sanity is to prepare the best he and his staff know how, then go out and play the game and try to walk away from it and say there was nothing else, "knowing what we knew," that could have been done.

"Now, if on the other hand, after the game you feel like you haven't worked, haven't prepared, then I think there's some self-recrimination bound to come about," he added. "Obviously, you're looking back and reflecting the things you might have done differently. Usually we feel that given what we knew going into the game that we did the best we could. I guess that's about all anybody can do."

Dickey's Florida situation differs in some respects from Nebraska in that the Gator school hasn't won a Southeastern Conference championship in the 62 years it has been in the league.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Because Los Angeles marched 98 yards from goal line to goal line without scoring, the Minnesota Vikings are on their way to Super Bowl IX following their 14-10 victory over the Rams in Sunday's National Football Conference championship game.

The Vikings' Super Bowl opponent will be the Pittsburgh Steelers, who will be making their first appearance in a National Football League championship game after beating Oakland 24-13 for the American Conference title.

A 29-yard touchdown catch by Jim Lash—the first score of his pro career, and a one-yard plunge by Dave Osborn gave the Vikings the points they needed, but it was the LA drive that didn't score that made the difference in this mistake-filled game.

"When they drove 98 yards and came away empty-handed it really made us feel good," said Viking Coach Bud Grant.

The Rams, trailing 7-3, started on their own one-yard line midway through the third period and had advanced to their 25 when James Harris called a pass play in the huddle.

"I saw Roy Winston blitzing," said the young Ram quarterback. "He was right on me, but I just tried the best I could to get away."

Harris slipped Winston's tackle and two others—by Jeff Siemon and Carl Eller—before firing for Harold Jackson.

"He was scrambling around, so I broke my pattern and ran to meet him," said Jackson, who grabbed the ball at midfield and headed for the goal line. He outran Nate Wright, but Jeff Wright caught him at the two. "I had a slight angle on him and was just praying that he wouldn't cut back," said Jeff Wright.

Jackson didn't, and the Rams had to settle for a 73-yard gain on the broken play. It looked like plenty when they moved the ball inside the one. But then an illegal procedure penalty on Tom Mack pushed them back to the six.

"Our offensive line said there was no movement," said Rams Coach Chuck Knox. "Tom says he did not move."

The official said he did. And it cost the Rams five important yards.

Harris got four of them back on a keeper, giving Los Angeles a third and goal from the two. This time Harris called an option play on which he could either pass or run. He rolled right, looking for Pat Curran.

"I saw Jackie Wallace, but I-didn't he could get turned around and reach the ball," said Harris. Wallace reached it just enough to tip it. When the ball came down, it settled into the arms of linebacker Wally Hilgenberg.

"We were in a 6-2 goal-line defense and played pass," said Hilgenberg. "We knew they had to score on the play and we had to make it hard for them."

When he grabbed the ball, Hilgenberg dropped to his knees, downing it for a touchback and giving Minnesota the ball at the 20.

"I'm too old and too slow to think about running the ball out of the end zone," he said.

Now it was Minnesota's turn to drive on this 30-degree day and the Vikings did just that, mostly along the ground with Chuck Foreman, who finished the game with 80 yards, and Osborn, who had 76, taking turns running.

Occasionally, Tarkenton spiced the drive with a pass and soon the Vikings were past midfield and moving toward the Rams' goal line. The drive was relentless, eating up the last 5½ minutes of the third quarter and the first 2½ of the final period.

Finally, the Vikings found themselves inside the Ram one with a fourth down coming up. A field-goal attempt would have been a chipper for Fred Cox, but the Minnesota placekicker never stirred off the bench.

"There was no decision," said Grant. "We were only six inches away from winning."

"When you come that far, that close to winning, there's no decision."

So the Vikings, criticized so often for being a conservative team, gambled. Tarkenton handed the ball to Osborn and the big back leaped over the line to paydirt for a 14-3 Minnesota lead.

The decision proved to be a vital one when Harris struck back with a 44-yard touchdown pass to Jackson a few moments later. Suddenly, Los Angeles was back in the game.

"The touchdown pass was a play-action pass like the one we had called earlier that did not connect," said Harris. This one did, and now the Rams had another chance.

Los Angeles got the ball back for Harris quickly, halting the Vikings on their next possession and taking over on the Minnesota 45 with more than seven minutes left to play. That's when Minnesota got tough.

On consecutive plays, Harris was sacked—first for a loss of 12 yards by Jim Marshall and Bob Lurtsema and then for 17 more yards by Doug Sutherland and Carl Eller.

Johnson, Burrow For Florida Air Attack

By RANDY YORK
New Orleans, La. — The image is there. A fleet receiver sneaks behind the run-conscious wishbone defenders and hauls in the bomb.

Wishbone teams don't attempt or accomplish that very often. But Florida, Nebraska's Super Bowl opponent here New Year's Eve, isn't an ordinary wishbone team.

The Gators like to put the ball in the air and Cornhusker cornerbacks Ardell Johnson and Jim Burrow expect to be busier than ever, trying to defend Florida's added wishbone dimension.

Johnson and Burrow sat down with defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin just after supper and just before heading to

Ardell Johnson
Tulane Stadium for a Sunday night practice session.

"The first thing wishbone teams like to do is to get the defensive backs coming up too fast," noted Burrow. "They like to full you to sleep, then hit the big one on you."

According to Johnson, "all wishbone teams try to do that. But Florida is unique. They had a very pass-oriented offense before they switched over to the wishbone and their coach (Doug Dickey) still likes to throw the ball."

"Florida is different from other wishbone teams because their passing attack is so much more versatile," Ardell added. "Teams like Oklahoma and Alabama generally will try to beat you deep when they try to beat you in the air."

"But a team like Florida will pass for a weapon to get a first and 10," points out Johnson. "They might go to the air on a third and 2 situation. Oklahoma and Alabama would never think of doing that. Florida will use the short pass patterns."

Burrow, Johnson and Kiffin all pointed to Florida's Lee McGriff being an unlikely game-breaker in a wishbone offense since he's a wide receiver.

But McGriff, a unanimous all-Southeast Conference selection, caught a 62-yard pass to break open the LSU game, snagged a 26-yard scoring pass to beat Maryland and caught the first touchdown pass of the season against Auburn.

He has caught 74 passes for 1,401 yards and 12 touchdowns in the last two seasons.

Kiffin concedes that Florida quarterback Don Gaffney and McGriff have "made a great combination, but they get a lot of their yards on broken patterns. If you give Gaffney time to run around and scramble, McGriff is going to beat you somewhere."

The Cornhusker defensive coordinator noted that "we don't flop the corners like we used to in defending the wishbone. We'll have some zone and some man-to-man coverage against Florida, but basically we'll be doing what we usually do."

"We've put a thing or two special in, but nothing that's likely to win or lose the game," adds Kiffin. "The big thing we have to do is contain Gaffney and keep him from scrambling."

"Of course, a lot of our defense will depend on our offense," Monte notes. "The way to break the bone is to make them play catchup. That's not their style."

"If we could get a good, early jump, then Florida's likely to have to go almost all slot. But if it's a tight game, they can mix it more and keep you guessing," explains Kiffin.

Kiffin pointed out that over the years, Nebraska has played better against the great dropback-passing quarterbacks than the Cornhuskers have against scramblers.

"The David Jaynes and Lynn Dickey's haven't been the ones who hurt us," he acknowledged. "You know wishbone quarterbacks are good runners or they wouldn't be there, but some are pro quarterbacks."

Burrow isn't convinced Florida's Gaffney is an exceptionally dangerous passer. "But," Jimmy says, "I know he's good enough to beat you."

Ardell took it one step further. "Sometimes," he noted, "you can beat an average passer and beat a team. A couple of great catches and momentum don't have anything to do with a quarterback's arm. Wisconsin had just an average passer and they beat us with the pass."

The Cornhusker cornerbacks are determined not to permit a repeat performance.

Husker Matmen Triumph

Miami, Fla. — The Nebraska wrestling team won its first first-place team trophy since 1949 here Sunday night by capturing the Sunshine National Open with 132 points.

John Carroll, Pa., was second with 131½ points, Florida was third with 118, Indiana fourth with 103 and Florida International University fifth with 87½.

More than 200 wrestlers representing 15 teams participated in the meet.

The Huskers' 190-pounder, Bob Johnson, won the championship of champions award by beating John Carroll's Kevin Hinkel, 12-0, for first place. NU's Alan Koss and Mike Vranich shared first place at 110.

Pittsburgh, Minnesota To Super Bowl

Steelers Stun Raiders, 24-13

Vikings Stop Rams, 14-10

OAKLAND (AP) — Art Rooney, one of the grand old men of pro football, stood in the chilly Oakland Coliseum, as expressionless as ever. After 42 years, he finally had a championship team.

And how did he plan to celebrate?

"The same way as I've celebrated losing," Rooney said with just a hint of a twinkle in his eyes. "In the old days, when we celebrated, we always had a big time. But now... well, I took the pledge about 15 years ago."

Rooney, and the entire city of Pittsburgh, have plenty to celebrate. Their Steelers are in their first National Football League championship, an entry in Super Bowl IX following their 24-13 victory Sunday over the favored Oakland Raiders in the American Conference title game. Now, only one more barrier to the ultimate remains—the Minnesota Vikings.

The defending National Conference champions, 24-7 losers a year ago to Miami in Super Bowl VIII, bought a return ticket by defeating the Los Angeles Rams 14-10 earlier Sunday.

"I don't know anything about Minnesota," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "You really can't tell anything on television. I guess we'll sort of have to play it by ear for now. But at the moment, we've just got a holiday coming up."

Everybody figured the Super Bowl matchup was going to be a contest of flashy arms—Fran Tarkenton's for Minnesota and Kenny Stabler's for Oakland. But in the end, it was Stabler's left arm and Jack Ham's opportunistic hands that broke the Raiders' backs in this AFC game and sent the Steelers toward New Orleans for their Jan. 12 showdown with the Vikings.

Stabler, who had thrown four touchdowns a week ago in overhauling the defending Super Bowl-champion Dolphins 28-26, went to the well once too often this time around. And it cost him dearly.

He had electrified the Coliseum crowd of 53,515 with a 38-yard scoring bomb to Cliff Branch, putting the Raiders ahead 10-3 early in the third period.

But back came the Steelers with one of their relentless ground assaults, capped by Franco Harris' explosive eighty-yard run on the first play of the fourth quarter. That tied it up once more, and Stabler immediately set about trying to untie it.

But his short dump pass to Charlie Smith was intercepted by Ham at the Oakland 34, and Pittsburgh's dynamic line-backer stutter-stepped the ball 25 yards to the Oakland nine. Three plays later, Terry Bradshaw faded back and found Lynn Swann wide open decenter in the end zone. His sixty-yard bullet to the rookie wide receiver, leaping behind defensive back Skip Thomas, untied it for the Steelers and put them ahead for good.

"It was just a man-to-man coverage," Ham said of the turning-point interception. "You can ask Ken about that, but I don't think it was a very good throw. He tried to dump it off to Smith and I had him pretty well covered."

Stabler was asked about the play and the game, but he was untalkative in defeat. "I've been nice to you guys' all year, but now I have nothing to say," he said. And then, to emphasize his mood, he repeated over and over again: "I have nothing to say, nothing to say."

Stabler was, in fact, virtually all of Oakland's offense. He completed 19 of 36 passes for 271 yards, while the Raiders could manage a mere 29 on the ground in 21 carries, less than 1½ yards per rush. Branch caught nine of Stabler's passes, a record for a conference championship game, winding up with 186 yards.

The Steelers, meanwhile, had balance. Franco Harris ground out 111 yards, scoring not only the tying touchdown but the Steeler's final one on a 21-yard burst with a minute to go shortly after Stabler had thrown his third and final interception.

It was rare when the Raiders slowed down Harris' bull-like charges. But when they did, Bradshaw had only to hand off to his other running back, Rocky Bleier. Coming off the mark with lightning quickness, Bleier added 98 yards to Pittsburgh's 224-yard rushing total.

Bradshaw, unlike Stabler, chose his passes with care, throwing only 17 times and completing eight for 95 yards.

The first mistake in the game was Pittsburgh's, and it gave Oakland its first points.

Lynn Swann fumbled a punt, Harold Hart recovered for the Raiders on the Pittsburgh 41-yard line, and Oakland took a 3-0 lead on George Blanda's 40-yard field goal less than five minutes into the game.

But the Steelers came back to tie it with 5:26 gone in the second period on a field goal of 23 yards by Roy Gerela, who had missed a 20-yard shot late in the first quarter.

In the second half, Stabler woke up the Raiders' offense with four successive completions—for 8 yards to Fred Biletnikoff, 20 to Branch, 10 more to Biletnikoff and then the 38 to Branch that put Oakland on top 10-3.

Then came what most of the players on both sides thought was the turning point, a 61-yard, eight-play march by Pittsburgh to tie it up again.

"Our offense came right back, moved right down the field and scored a touchdown, and we were right back in the game," said Ham. "That's when I think we got our momentum really geared up."

"After that touchdown pass we knew we had to have some offense ourselves," added Noll. "And we had it. Our offensive line probably played the best it has all year. That drive we had right after that was the turning point for us. When we went the length of the field and scored right after they had, we knew we could control the game."

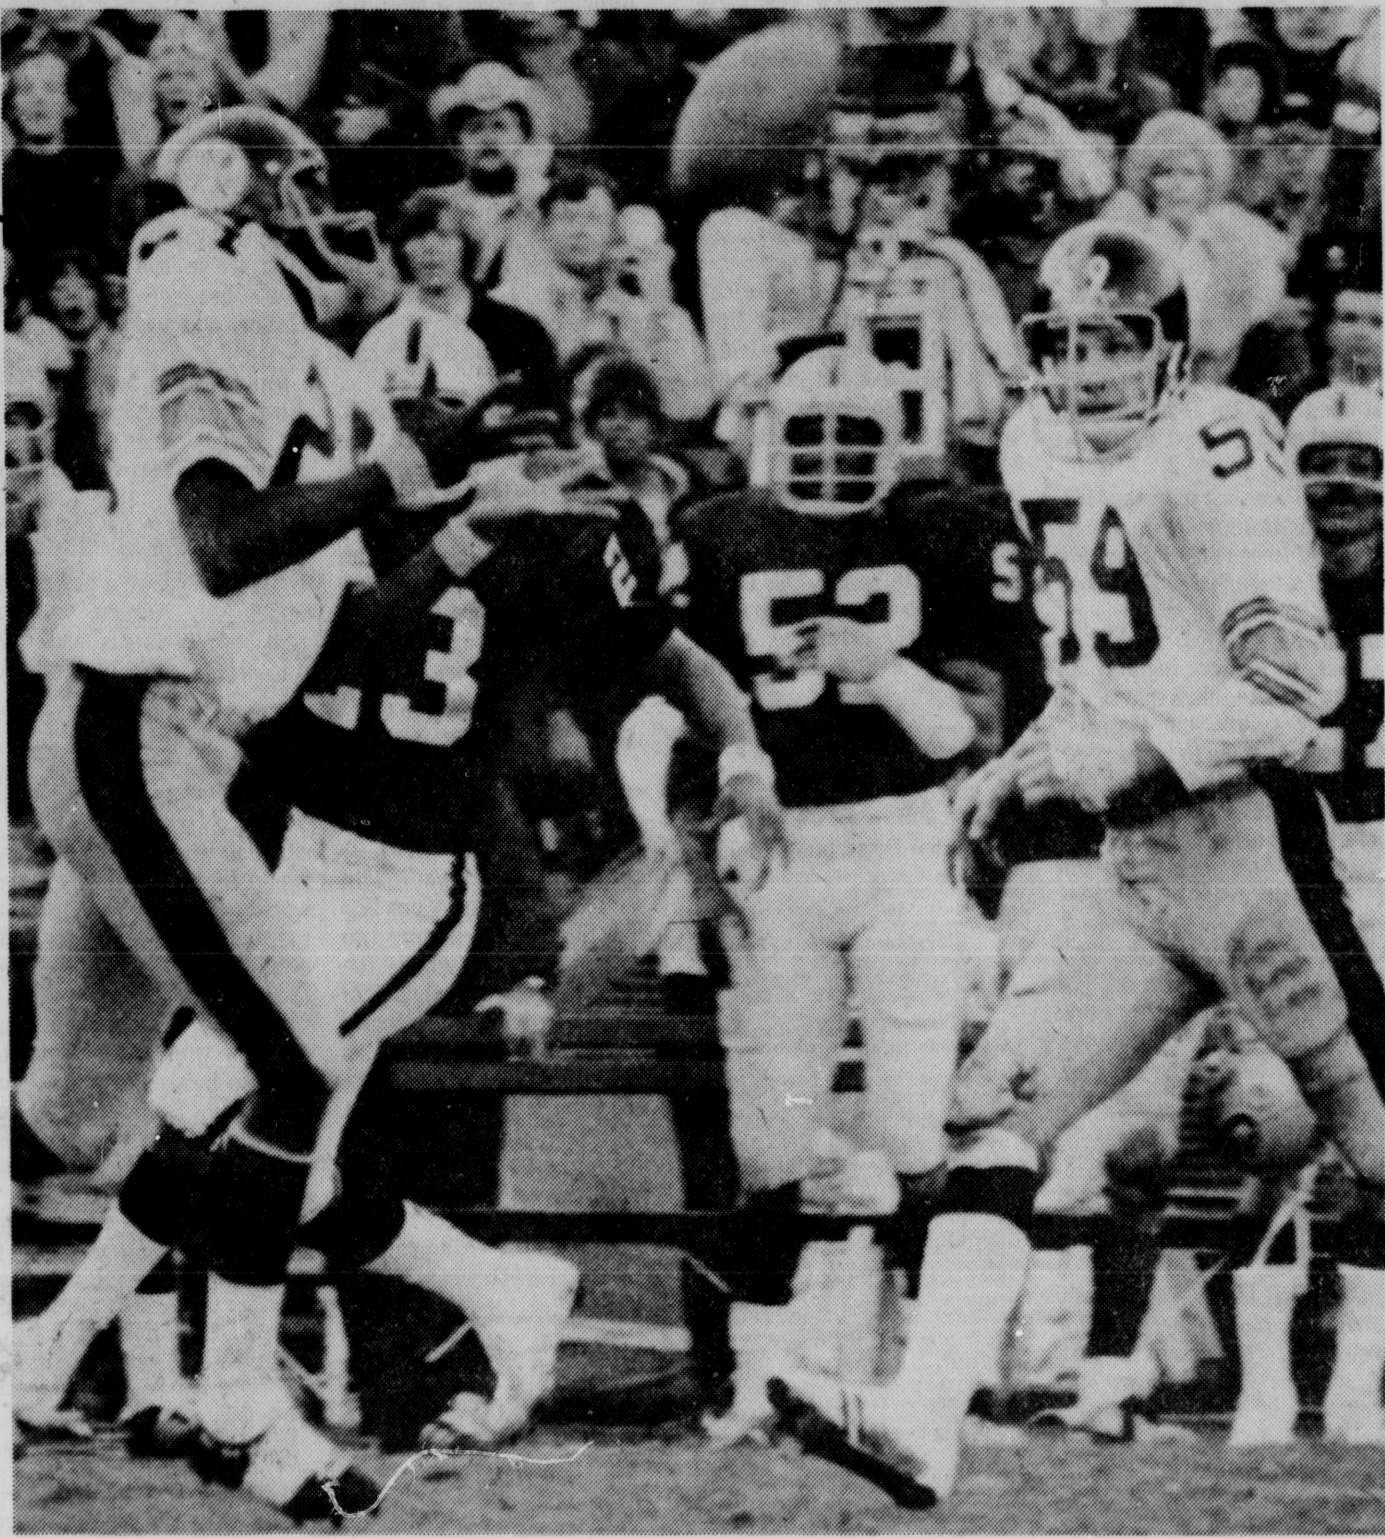

"Terry called a masterful game, and controlled the football," Noll added. "Even when we made mistakes, nobody was being discouraged. The guys were patting one another on the back at halftime, and they didn't lose their poise. They just hung in there."

After Swann's touchdown catch, the Raiders once again threatened to ride Stabler's arm to glory.

Dickey's Florida situation differs in some respects from Nebraska in that the Gator school hasn't won a Southeastern Conference championship in the 62 years it has been in the league.

"I think it has become an obsession to Florida people that this is the only thing you can do in football (win the championship), and if you don't they go into this 'wait 'til next year business.'"

Obviously, Dickey thinks there's more to the game than winning the title, although he'd certainly like to do it. He, too, believes in preparing the best his staff knows how and let the chips fall where they may, always hoping the players perform to the best of their ability.

"I can't worry about all the guys in the barber shops and coffee shops who want to make remarks they don't know anything about," he said. "I'm not gonna let myself get uptight about it and if they want to fire me because I don't get that way often enough, I'll just walk down the street and find something else to do."

Neither Osborne nor Dickey want their thinking to be construed that they aren't competitive.

"Football is a game and we gonna play the devil out of it everytime we line up," Dickey said. "I'm going to be competitive as the devil because if you aren't you don't belong in the coaching business."

Dickey said he has a wife and family and that he gets up every morning and has breakfast with them. "When I get to the point I can't do that and enjoy my kids and my family then that's time to get out," he said. "I'm not at that point. I'm enjoying it now."

Husker Matmen Triumph

Miami, Fla. — The Nebraska wrestling team won its first first-place team trophy since 1949 here Sunday night by capturing the Sunshine National Open with 132 points.

John Carroll, Pa., was second with 131½ points, Florida was third with 118, Indiana fourth with 103 and Florida International University fifth with 87½.

More than 200 wrestlers representing 15 teams participated in the meet.

The Huskers' 190-pounder, Bob Johnson, won the championship of champions award by beating John Carroll's Kevin Hinkel, 12-0, for first place. NU's Alan Koss and Mike Vranich shared first place at 110.

Other Husker places:

Johnson, Burrow For Florida Air Attack

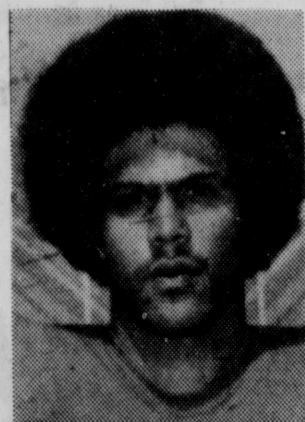

By RANDY YORK

New Orleans, La. — The image is there. A fleet receiver sneaks behind the run-conscious wishbone defenders and hauls in the bomb.

Wishbone teams don't attempt or accomplish that very often. But Florida, Nebraska's Sugar Bowl opponent here New Year's Eve, isn't an ordinary wishbone team.

The Gators like to put the ball in the air and Cornhusker cornerbacks Ardell Johnson and Jim Burrow expect to be busier than ever, trying to defend Florida's added wishbone dimension.

Johnson and Burrow sat down with defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin just after supper and just before heading to

Ardell Johnson
Tulane Stadium for a Sunday night practice session.

"The first thing wishbone teams like to do is to get the defensive backs coming up too fast," noted Burrow. "They like to lull you to sleep, then hit the big one on you."

According to Johnson, "all wishbone teams try to do that. But Florida is unique. They had a very pass-oriented offense before they switched over to the wishbone and their coach (Doug Dickey) still likes to throw the ball."

"Florida is different from other wishbone teams because their passing attack is so much more versatile," Ardell added. "Teams like Oklahoma and Alabama generally will try to beat you deep when they try to beat you in the air."

"But a team like Florida will pass for a weapon to get a first and 10," points out Johnson. "They might go to the air on a third and 2 situation. Oklahoma and Alabama would never think of doing that. Florida will use the short pass patterns."

Burrow, Johnson and Kiffin all pointed to Florida's Lee McGriff being an unlikely game-breaker in a wishbone offense since he's a wide receiver.

But McGriff, a unanimous all-Southeast Conference selection, caught a 62-yard pass to break open the LSU game, snagged a 26-yard scoring pass to beat Maryland and caught the first touchdown pass of the season against Auburn.

He has caught 74 passes for 1,401 yards and 12 touchdowns in the last two seasons.

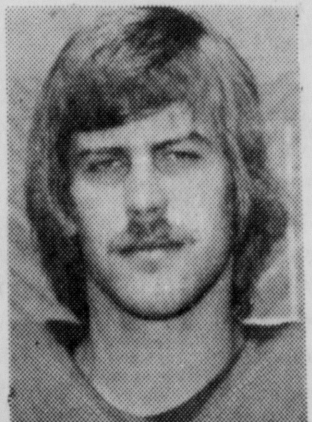

Kiffin concedes that Florida quarterback Don Gaffney and McGriff have "made a great combination, but they get a lot of their yards on broken patterns. If you give Gaffney time to run around and scramble, McGriff is going to beat you somewhere."

The Cornhusker defensive coordinator noted that "we don't flop the corners like we used to in defending the wishbone. We'll have some zone and some man-to-man coverage against Florida, but basically we'll be doing what we usually do."

"We've put a thing or two special in, but nothing that's likely to win or lose the game," adds Kiffin. "The big thing we have to do is contain Gaffney and keep him from scrambling."

"Of course, a lot of our defense will depend on our offense," Monte notes. "The way to break the bone is to make them play catchup. That's not their style."

"If we could get a good, early jump, then Florida's likely to have to go almost all slot. But if it's a tight game, they can mix it more and keep you guessing," explains Kiffin.

Kiffin pointed out that over the years, Nebraska has played better against the great dropback-passing quarterbacks than the Cornhuskers have against scramblers.

Nebrasker In Sugar Bowl

New Orleans, La. — Southern accents always fascinated me. That explains why I'm enjoying New ORR-lens so much while awaiting Nebraska's Sugar Bowl date with Florider Tuesday evening in Tulane Stadium.

It won't be for the national championship, but it should be a whole of a game. Alabama and Oklahoma are the title contenders; the Crimson Tide set for a New Year's night battle against Notre Damer in the ORR-ange Bowl in Miamer while the Sooners will be sitting in front of their television sets rooting for the Irish so they'll become No. 1.

There'll be a little over 14,000 Cornhusker fans in Tulane Stadium for the 7 p.m. kickoff New Year's eve. And if you decide at the last minute to fly down there are plenty of game tickets and hotel rooms available. Your only difficulty might be getting an airline reservation.

The availability of both tickets and rooms comes as a surprise to many because of early reports that neither would be in supply. It isn't a surprise, however, to Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger.

He believes many fans from Auburn and Alabama had made reservations long before the Huskers and Gators were selected, just to protect themselves in event their teams wound up playing here.

Stories in Nebraska newspapers immediately after the Huskers accepted the bid reported that both tickets and hotel rooms were all booked up. That was before cancellations started coming in from Auburn followers, who had to switch plans from here to Jacksonville where the War Eagles will play Texas Monday night, and from Alabama, which is headed for Miami.

Perhaps there are other reasons for the situation, including the current national economy, but for the first time in years it's a buyer's market here at Sugar Bowl time.

Although several hotels are full, the majority have many rooms available. Most expect to be filled to only 75 per cent occupancy. Even the Fontainebleau Motor Hotel, where the Huskers are staying, has plenty of rooms left.

Sugar Bowl Notes

Husker players weren't given a wake-up call Sunday. Some, however, got up to attend church services. Their first required meeting of the day was at 12:30 p.m. They had the afternoon off and most spent it around the swimming pool to enjoy the second consecutive day of bright sunshine and temperatures in the mid-to-high 70s.

Nebraska went through an hour-and-a-half polishing workout at 7 p.m. in Tulane Stadium, wearing just sweat clothes. The Huskers will loosen up for about a half hour Monday evening.

Quarterback Dave Humm, along with Gator signal-caller Don Gaffney are featured in a color drawing on the cover of the 104-page official Sugar Bowl program, which will be sold at the stadium at $1.50 a copy.

The schedule of game-night festivities on page 59 shows the actual kickoff is scheduled for 7:08 p.m., Lincoln time. The Husker and Gator bands will take the field at 5:45 p.m. to entertain early arriving fans. They'll also be back for five-minute segments before the game and for halftime festivities. There'll be a fireworks display and the intermission program will be concluded with the playing of "Auld Lang Syne," traditional song which annually rings out the old year and brings in the new.

The weatherman is predicting cloudy skies and occasional rain Tuesday night or Wednesday with mild temperatures in the low 50s.

Interesting fact: Nebraska, once upon a time, was a part of Louisiana and, in theory, the state was governed from New Orleans.

Heiser Favors Orange

NEW ORLEANS (A.P.) — Nebraska wingback Tom Heiser says he'd just as soon let Oklahoma have the honor of playing next year's Sugar Bowl in the Louisiana Superdome.

"The Big Eight has an agreement with the Orange Bowl to send the champion there every year from now on. The Superdome is a heck of a stadium, and I wish it had been ready for this year's game. But Oklahoma can have the honor next year," he said.

At this time last year, the $163-million indoor arena was expected to be ready for the 1974 football season, have all the bugs worked out and be in full swing for this Sugar Bowl.

"I'd sure like to play in something like this," said senior offensive guard Stan Hegener. "No rain or snow to bother you, no heat or cold problems. We need something like this for the cold in Nebraska."

Hegener—an engineering student—spent most of the tour with his head cocked far back looking upward at the structural details of the 13-acre roof. He appeared to be one of the few who understood the tour guide's lengthy lecture on the complex problems of building the dome.

Texas, Auburn Set In Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Longhorns, who lost a Six Year New Year's Day lease on the Cotton Bowl, will make their first Gator Bowl football game appearance Monday night against the Auburn Tigers, here for the sixth time.

And for the first time in many years, some of the stadium's 70,000 seats may be empty.

Blaming it on the nation's drooping economy, Gator Bowl executive vice president George Olsen estimates the crowd will number 62,000. The game will be nationally televised by ABC with a 8 p.m. CST kickoff.

Auburn brings a 9-2 record and No. 6 national ranking as credentials for its third Gator Bowl game in four years. The Tigers upset Colorado two years ago and won a thriller over Mississippi Jan. 2, 1971. In all,

Auburn has won three Gator Bowl games and lost two.

Although Auburn is rated five notches ahead of No. 11 Texas, the Longhorns are favored in many quarters by as much as a touchdown, prompting Auburn Coach Ralph "Shug" Jordan to say: "They don't have much confidence in our team. But I do."

And Coach Darrell Royal of Texas said "I don't see how anybody could pick us. They (Auburn) are ranked sixth and we're 11th."

Texas, 8-3, lost to Oklahoma, Texas Tech and Baylor. But the Horns finished like a whirlwind by beating Texas Christian 81-16 and Texas A&M 32-3.

The Longhorns operate from the wishbone offense and Auburn's two losses were to wishbone teams Florida and Alabama. But Jordan maintains his Tigers aren't buffaloed by the power-running of a wishbone.

Besides, he said, "We are using several new defensive fronts and philosophies."

To which Royal says, "I hope Auburn hasn't made too many changes. We are preparing for them to do what they have done before against the wishbone. And we've had little practice time because of late final exams and bad weather."

Anyone who bought a Gator Bowl ticket with expectations of an aerial circus will be disappointed. Texas was 128th and last among major teams in passing yardage for the season. Auburn was 123rd.

"We don't have a bad passing attack at Auburn," Jordan said. "Phil Gargas and Chris Vaccarella, our quarterbacks, throw well. But we haven't had to pass that much."

The Tiger coach said knowing that Texas runs on almost every play hasn't made it easier to prepare because "it would be deadly psychology to expect Texas to run all the time. As soon as you think that, they'll hit you with a big pass."

Marty Akins and Mike Presley, the Texas quarterbacks, threw 99 times this season and between them completed only 33.

Royal said he won't try a passing spree to entertain the spectators.

"The only entertainment I know is to keep the other team out of our end zone and get in theirs," he said. "The only thing good for the game and for ticket sales is winning."

The Texas running attack is led by a pair of fullbacks—senior Roosevelt Leaks and freshman Earl Campbell.

Leaks was hobbled by injuries most of the season but Royal said he is almost 100 per cent physically. Campbell led the Longhorns with 928 yards, averaging 5.7 per carry.

Auburn fullback Seedrick McIntyre averaged 4.9 yards a carry in gaining a total of 863 yards. He is flanked by Rick Neel or Mitzi Jackson, who alternate as the other running back in the Tiger offense.

Both teams are tough on defense and each placed a defensive man on the All-American team—250-pound tackle Doug English of Texas and 240-pound linebacker Ken Bernick of Auburn.

Coaches Against Playoffs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Coach Doug Dickey, whose 18th ranked Florida Gators wound up in the Sugar Bowl despite two late-season defeats, admits the bowls may have bungled in making their selections so early this year.

But Dickey and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne insist that the present way of selecting teams for post-season play is far better than a national playoff.

"If you had a championship playoff, I think you would have a situation where 10 or 12 schools would recruit nationally and it would develop into a case of them in one category and everybody else in another," said Dickey.

"We have a more wholesome situation with 12 or 14 teams going to bowls every year," he continued. "Some of the teams in bowls this year will drop back next year and others will move up."

"I think everybody is jumping on the bowl people too soon. If they muffed it a little bit this year, let them sit down and come up with answers. They're smart people. If they feel like they made mistakes they'll correct them."

Osborne acknowledged that bowl officials are disturbed about being driven into their selections ever earlier in the absence of a signing date, which would be enforced by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"The bowls probably would like the NCAA to take it over again," said Osborne.

But he echoed Dickey's opposition to a playoff system with the teams selected by an NCAA formula.

"With a playoff there would be only one winner out of 120 or so colleges playing major football," said Osborne. "This way there are two or three or four teams who can curse the people who vote in the polls and say they are the real national champs."

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Kansas City-Omaha outscored Portland 12-2 in the final four minutes, with Jimmy Walker and Nate Archibald each scoring five points in the surge, and the Kings stopped the Trail Blazers 103-99 in a National Basketball Association game Sunday night.

The rally brought the Kings back from a 97-91 deficit and boosted them to their third straight victory. It was Portland's third consecutive loss.

Archibald, who exploded for 14 points in the third period, finished as high scorer with 31 points, and Walker had 19.

Sidney Wicks topped Portland with 25 points, followed by John Johnson with 22.

The Blazers played without starting guard Geoff Petrie and lost guard Larry Steele late in the third quarter with a pinched nerve.

Nebraska," he said. "He was just outstanding 18 points and a game-leading 12 rebounds."

Siegel, a widely-recruited prep athlete out of Fairbury High School still thought NU should have defeated KU.

"We had them . . . We should of won the game," said Siegel, who finally narrowed his college choices two years ago to Nebraska and Kansas. "We wanted that game so much."

"There's nothing like having to play Oklahoma, Kansas and Kansas State back-to-back," said Cipriano, noting Nebraska's placement in the rugged first division of the tournament pairings.

"That's the first time we've given the effort and gotten beat this year," he said. "But we really ended up beating ourselves. We made some crucial mistakes in the last three minutes."

Cipriano cited junior guard Steve Willis, who hit a game-leading 27 points against Kansas, for "playing awfully well and giving us some great outside shooting."

Monday's other games include Colorado (3-6) against Oklahoma State (3-6) at 1 p.m. for seventh place, Oklahoma (6-2) against Missouri (-72) at 7 p.m. for fifth place and the championship game at 9 p.m. sends Kansas (6-4) against Iowa State (5-5).

TOURNEY NOTES — It was to the Huskers' credit they didn't use several mishaps by the scoreclock as excuses for the Kansas loss . . . Early in the first half, the clock continued to run after Danny Knight was assessed a foul. NU (and KU, too) lost 23 seconds when the officials forgot to stop the clock while Steve Erwin was shooting his free throws . . . Later on, Steve Willis scored a 20-footer, but the Huskers had called time out just as the shot left Willis' hand. Naturally, the basket was nullified. . . The Huskers hesitated to call timeout after Tommie Smith hit what proved to be the winner with 12 seconds left because they weren't certain they had any timeouts remaining. Time was finally called with six seconds left . . . Nebraska solved KU's zone defense in the first half, but when the Jayhawks switched to a man-to-man defense it wore down Nebraska. Kansas possesses bigger, more physical performers than NU . . . The Huskers missed all four free throws in the second half after going 8 for 11 in the opening 20 minutes . . . The 18 field goals by Oklahoma's 6-9 all-American Alvan Adams tied a tournament record by (remember him?) Wilt Chamberlain. Adams finished with 38 points as Oklahoma topped state rival Oklahoma State, 79-70, in Saturday's consolation semifinals.

Heiser Favors Orange

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Nebraska wingback Tom Heiser says he'd just as soon let Oklahoma have the honor of playing next year's Sugar Bowl in the Louisiana Superdome.

"The Big Eight has an agreement with the Orange Bowl to send the champion there every year from now on. The Superdome is a heck of a stadium, and I wish it had been ready for this year's game. But Oklahoma can have the honor next year," he said.

At this time last year, the $163-million indoor arena was expected to be ready for the 1974 football season, have all the bugs worked out and be in full swing for this Sugar Bowl.

"I'd sure like to play in something like this," said senior offensive guard Stan Hegener. "No rain or snow to bother you, no heat or cold problems. We need something like this for the cold in Nebraska."

Hegener—an engineering student—spent most of the tour with his head cocked far back looking upward at the structural details of the 13-acre roof. He appeared to be one of the few who understood the tour guide's lengthy lecture on the complex problems of building the dome.

Texas, Auburn Set In Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Longhorns, who lost a six-year New Year's Day lease on the Cotton Bowl, will make their first Gator Bowl football game appearance Monday night against the Auburn Tigers, here for the sixth time.

And for the first time in many years, some of the stadium's 70,000 seats may be empty.

Blaming it on the nation's drooping economy, Gator Bowl executive vice president George Olsen estimates the crowd will number 62,000. The game will be nationally televised by ABC with a 8 p.m. CST kickoff.

Auburn brings a 9-2 record and No. 6 national ranking as credentials for its third Gator Bowl game in four years. The Tigers upset Colorado two years ago and won a thriller over Mississippi Jan. 2, 1971. In all,

NU Could Win

Nebraska," he said. "He was just outstanding 18 points and a game-leading 12 rebounds."

Siegel, a widely-recruited prep athlete out of Fairbury High School still thought NU should have defeated KU.

"We had them . . . We should of won the game," said Siegel, who finally narrowed his college choices two years ago to Nebraska and Kansas. "We wanted that game so much."

"There's nothing like having to play Oklahoma, Kansas and Kansas State back-to-back," said Cipriano, noting Nebraska's placement in the rugged first division of the tournament pairings.

"That's the first time we've given the effort and gotten beat this year," he said. "But we really ended up beating ourselves. We made some crucial mistakes in the last three minutes."

Cipriano cited junior guard Steve Willis, who hit a game-leading 27 points against Kansas, for "playing awfully well and giving us some great outside shooting."

Monday's other games include Colorado (3-6) against Oklahoma State (3-6) at 1 p.m. for seventh place, Oklahoma (6-2) against Missouri (-72) at 7 p.m. for fifth place and the championship game at 9 p.m. sends Kansas (6-4) against Iowa State (5-5).

TOURNEY NOTES — It was to the Huskers' credit they didn't use several mishaps by the scoreclock as excuses for the Kansas loss. . . . Early in the first half, the clock continued to run after Danny Knight was assessed a foul. NU (and KU, too) lost 23 seconds when the officials forgot to stop the clock while Steve Ervin was shooting his free throws. . . . Later on, Steve Willis scored a 20-footer, but the Huskers had called time out just as the shot left Willis' hand. Naturally, the basket was nullified. . . . The Huskers intended to call timeout after Tommie Smith hit what proved to be the winner with 12 seconds left because they weren't certain they had any timeouts remaining. Time was finally called with six seconds left. . . . Nebraska solved KU's zone defense in the first half, but when the Jayhawks switched to a man-to-man defense it wore down Nebraska. Kansas possesses bigger, more physical performers than NU. . . . The Huskers missed all four free throws in the second half after going 8 for 11 in the opening 20 minutes. . . . The 18 field goals by Oklahoma's 6-9-all-American Alvan Adams tied a tournament record by (remember him?) Wilt Chamberlain. Adams finished with 38 points as Oklahoma topped state rival Oklahoma State, 79-70, in Saturday's consolation semifinals.

Auburn has won three Gator Bowl games and lost two.

Although Auburn is rated five notches ahead of No. 11 Texas, the Longhorns are favored in many quarters by as much as a touchdown, prompting Auburn Coach Ralph "Shug" Jordan to say: "They don't have much confidence in our team. But I do."

And Coach Darrell Royal of Texas said "I don't see how anybody could pick us. They (Auburn) are ranked sixth and we're 11th."

Texas, 8-3, lost to Oklahoma, Texas Tech and Baylor. But the Horns finished like a whirlwind by beating Texas Christian 81-16 and Texas A&M 32-3.

The Longhorns operate from the wishbone offense and Auburn's two losses were to wishbone teams Florida and Alabama. But Jordan maintains his team is confident.

Coach Doug Dickey, whose 18th ranked Florida Gators wound up in the Sugar Bowl despite two late-season defeats, admits the bowls may have bungled in making their selections so early this year.

But Dickey and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne insist that the present way of selecting teams for post-season play is far better than a national playoff.

Tigers aren't buffaloed by the power-running of a wishbone.

Besides, he said, "We are using several new defensive fronts and philosophies."

To which Royal says, "I hope Auburn hasn't made too many changes. We are preparing for them to do what they have done before against the wishbone. And we've had little practice time because of late final exams and bad weather."

Anyone who bought a Gator Bowl ticket with expectations of an aerial circus will be disappointed. Texas was 128th and last among major teams in passing yardage for the season. Auburn was 123rd.

"We don't have a bad passing attack at Auburn," Jordan said. "Phil Gargas and Chris Vaccarella, our quarterbacks,

Round 4 Ends In Inaugural Ball Tiff

By EDWARD W. HOWARD

Associated Press Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and the National Organization for Women (NOW) have concluded round four in an ongoing-if fruitless-hassle over the governor's inaugural ball.

NOW initially suggested the ball be done away with this year, as a demonstration of Exon's personal concern for the economy. The group suggested, in effect, that the whole thing was costly and frivolous.

NOW's objections brought a letter from Exon, who pointed out the affair is paid for by voluntary contributions and net proceeds go to charity. It also brought DeLoris Clouse, president of NOW's Lincoln chapter, a telephone call from the governor's wife, who explained things in much the same way her spouse did in his letter.

Exon's rejoinder was that NOW's position "would be tantamount to cancelling all voluntary activities everywhere in Nebraska, including various and traditional functions on the university campus."

Ms. Clouse, who prefers that designation, then wrote Exon a letter, criticizing him on two points.

"Our intent was to emphasize to you... that sacrificing the traditional inaugural ball would demonstrate your concern for all the jobless and hungry people in this state," the letter said. It also proposed, in lieu of the inaugural ball, a "Children's Ball" at the governor's mansion. The letter suggested Exon could invite "the children of jobless and fatherless families, and children in foster homes and institutions, and divert all proceeds raised for the inaugural ball to buy food and gifts for these children."

Ms. Clouse also said Exon had been "highly unprofessional" in writing to her at the University of Nebraska, where she is an associate professor, rather than to her home, from which the original Exon letter was sent.

That left Exon and NOW ready for round four, in which the governor wrote a letter saying he hadn't been offended when NOW wrote to him at his home, and that he couldn't understand Ms. Clouse being upset by him writing to her at her professional address.

Nevertheless, Exon apologized. He said he does "respect the NOW organization and its goals and objectives."

He added, "I also hope that you would recognize the right of others, those who wish to attend the inaugural ball and finance same, to make their independent judgment."

He made no mention of the "Children's Ball" suggestion. Ms. Clouse said she had not decided what steps—if any—NOW would take next.

With the act of Marlon Brando in town recently, and a sequel to his film, "The Godfather," opening, one couldn't help but remember the story about U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis.

You don't remember? Good. It goes like this. Joe "alachi" was turning state's evidence against organized crime during televised Senate subcommittee hearings. The senators involved—including Curtis—were asked to avoid grandstanding for the home folks.

Curtis promptly asked Valachi about "the state of organized crime in Omaha."

Valachi didn't answer, but began conferring with a nearby Justice Department official. It looked like Curtis had struck a nerve—until it was learned what Valachi had been whispering: "Where the hell is Omaha?"

Employee Thievery Investigated In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — One Omaha city employee has been forced to resign and others are under investigation in a crackdown on employee stealing, officials said.

Property control supervisor Walter Peffer Jr. said "the mayor says eliminate them; get rid of the stealers."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky said all department heads have been instructed to fire a thief unless the incident is very minor.

Peffer said a public works employee allegedly was caught with $5,200 worth of city equipment at his West Omaha residence.

The items were discovered Dec. 6 in a cooperative investigation with the Police Department, Peffer said. Other investigations are underway.

Peffer said among items found in the unidentified man's garage were a pneumatic hammer, portable car washer, air compressor, steam cleaner, sump pump and chain hoist.

Police and city officials now are investigating another incident in which an employee allegedly used a city truck to haul stolen carpeting from a home for the elderly.

He said investigations also are under way in a third incident, adding that a half-dozen other incidents have been cleared up by return of the property.

Peffer noted that the city is in a somewhat different position than private employers because employees can appeal to the Personnel Board for reinstatement.

Therefore, he said, the city has to have a good case even to fire an employee.

Peffer said the employee who lost his job was implicated after police questioned him in connection with the theft of lumber from a club. During questioning, Peffer said, police noticed items painted the city's equipment orange color in the man's garage.

Investigation continued and he said the employee admitted taking two of the items and a search turned up additional missing equipment.

Peffer said the man was not charged with a criminal offense.

Heese said the mere firing from his job is a harsher penalty than the employee will get going to court if it is a first offense. He added that the court will probably place the offender on probation or assess a small fine.

Peffer said criminal prosecution is also more expensive, and the city will probably end up recovering less equipment than if an employee is allowed to cooperate.

Roof Destroyed; Heater Blamed In Kearney Fire

Kearney (AP) — An overhead heater was believed to have started a fire at the Kearney warehouse of Stantal Sound Inc., early Sunday.

Owner Stan Miller reported a fourth to a third of the roof was destroyed by the blaze. There also was smoke and water damage to the building.

Miller said the building was full of rental sound equipment that is used for professional groups as well as some retail merchandise.

Miller said damage to the building was about $10,000. Damage to equipment was roughly $15,000 to $20,000.

"It is not our goal to become head hunters. The goal is to spot the problem, define it, narrow it down and correct the problem."

Detective David Heese said the city's firing policy is the same standard followed by private industry. He explained, "basically, where you have an employee stealing from an employer, in 99 per cent of the cases, the employee is not prosecuted."

Omaha Doctor, Cassidy, Rites Slated Monday

Omaha (AP) — Funeral services will be Monday afternoon for Dr. Waldron A. Cassidy, a founder of the Omaha Hearing School for Children.

The 79-year-old long-time physician and surgeon died Friday.

A native of Shelby, Iowa, Dr. Cassidy was graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in 1918. He practiced in Omaha from 1934 until his retirement in 1955.

He became a trustee of Joslyn Art Museum in 1947 and was a trustee emeritus at the time of his death.

Survivors include his widow and a daughter.

Alabama Oil Possible

Houston (AP) — Initial tests on an 18,000-foot Alabama well could indicate a significant discovery, a Getty Oil Co. spokesman says.

Nebraska Wildlife Federation's first annual Outstanding Conservation Achievements Awards banquet.

The event is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the Yancey Hotel.

Connie Bowen, executive director of the Nebraska federation, said Kimball will discuss opportunities for the environmental conservation movement. Special emphasis will be given to issues related to Nebraska such as the Midstate Irrigation Project and the proposed Platte River Wildlife Refuge.

Kimball has served on various advisory committees to the Departments of Interior, Agriculture, Housing and Urban Development, Commerce and State.

He is a member of the President's Air Quality Advisory Board. He was a member of the United States delegation to the first meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. joint committee on cooperation in the field of environmental protection held in Moscow in 1972, and was also a member of the U.S. delegation to the International Whaling Commission meeting in London this year.

The awards banquet and Kimball's address will conclude a daylong public symposium entitled "In Search of a Water Ethic in Nebraska" — a combined effort of environmental conservation interests throughout the state.

Round 4 Ends In Inaugural Ball Tiff

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and the National Organization for Women (NOW) have concluded round four in an ongoing-if fruitless-hassle over the governor's inaugural ball.

NOW initially suggested the ball be done away with this year, as a demonstration of Exon's personal concern for the economy. The group suggested, in effect, that the whole thing was costly and frivolous.

NOW's objections brought a letter from Exon, who pointed out the affair is paid for by voluntary contributions and net proceeds go to charity. It also brought DeLoris Clouse, president of NOW's Lincoln chapter, a telephone call from the governor's wife, who explained things in much the same way her spouse did in his letter.

Exon's rejoinder was that NOW's position "would be tantamount to cancelling all voluntary activities everywhere in Nebraska, including various and traditional functions on the university campus."

Ms. Clouse, who prefers that designation, then wrote Exon a letter, criticizing him on two points.

"Our intent was to emphasize to you... that sacrificing the traditional inaugural ball would demonstrate your concern for all the jobless and hungry people in this state," the letter said. It also proposed, in lieu of the inaugural ball, a "Children's Ball" at the governor's mansion. The letter suggested Exon could invite "the children of jobless and fatherless families, and children in foster homes and institutions, and divert all proceeds raised for the inaugural ball to buy food and gifts for these children."

Ms. Clouse also said Exon had been "highly unprofessional" in writing to her at the University of Nebraska, where she is an associate professor, rather than to her home, from which the original Exon letter was sent.

That left Exon and NOW ready for round four, in which the governor wrote a letter saying he hadn't been offended when NOW wrote to him at his home, and that he couldn't understand Ms. Clouse being upset by him writing to her at her professional address.

Nevertheless, Exon apologized. He said he does "respect the NOW organization and its goals and objectives."

He added, "I also hope that you would recognize the right of others, those who wish to attend the inaugural ball and finance same, to make their independent judgment."

He made no mention of the "Children's Ball" suggestion. Ms. Clouse said she had not decided what steps—if any—NOW would take next.

With the act of Marlon Brando in town recently, and a sequel to his film, "The Godfather," opening, one couldn't help but remember the story about U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis.

You don't remember? Good. It goes like this. Joe Valachi was turning state's evidence against organized crime during televised Senate subcommittee hearings. The senators involved—including Curtis—were asked to avoid grandstanding for the home folks.

Curtis promptly asked Valachi about "the state of organized crime in Omaha."

Valachi didn't answer, but began conferring with a nearby Justice Department official. It looked like Curtis had struck a nerve—until it was learned what Valachi had been whispering:

"Where the hell is Omaha?"

Employee Thievery Investigated In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — One Omaha city employee has been forced to resign and others are under investigation in a crackdown on employee stealing, officials said.

Property control supervisor Walter Peffer Jr. said "the mayor says eliminate them get rid of the stealers."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky said all department heads have been instructed to fire a thief unless the incident is very minor.

Peffer said a public works employee allegedly was caught with $5,200 worth of city equipment at his West Omaha residence.

The items were discovered Dec. 6 in a cooperative investigation with the Police Department, Peffer said. Other investigations are underway.

Peffer said among items found in the unidentified man's garage was a pneumatic hammer, portable car washer, air compressor, steam cleaner, sump pump and chain hoist.

Police and city officials now are investigating another incident in which an employee allegedly used a city truck to haul stolen carpeting from a home for the elderly.

He said investigations also are under way in a third incident, adding that a half-dozen other incidents have been cleared up by return of the property.

Peffer noted that the city is in a somewhat different position than private employers because employees can appeal to the Personnel Board for reinstatement.

Therefore, he said, the city has to have a good case even to fire an employee.

Peffer said the employee who lost his job was implicated after police questioned him in connection with the theft of lumber from a club. During questioning, Peffer said, police noticed items painted the city's equipment orange color in the man's garage.

Investigation continued and he said the employee admitted taking two of the items and a search turned up additional missing equipment.

Peffer said the man was not charged with a criminal offense.

Heese said the mere firing from his job is a harsher penalty than the employee will get going to court if it is a first offense. He added that the court will probably place the offender on probation or assess a small fine.

Peffer said criminal prosecution is also more expensive, and the city will probably end up recovering less equipment than if an employee is allowed to cooperate.

Environmental Official Slates Speech In G.I.

By United Press International
Thomas L. Kimball, who heads the world's largest environmental conservation organization, will speak in Grand Island on Jan. 18.

Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, will address the Nebraska Wildlife Federation's first annual Outstanding Conservation Achievements Awards banquet.

The event is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the Yancey Hotel.

Connie Bowen, executive director of the Nebraska federation, said Kimball will discuss opportunities for the environmental conservation movement. Special emphasis will be given to issues related to Nebraska such as the Midstate Irrigation Project and the proposed Platte River Wildlife Refuge.

Kimball has served on various advisory committees to the Departments of Interior, Agriculture, Housing and Urban Development, Commerce and State.

He is a member of the President's Air Quality Advisory Board. He was a member of the United States delegation to the first meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. joint committee on cooperation in the field of environmental protection held in Moscow in 1972, and was also a member of the U.S. delegation to the International Whaling Commission meeting in London this year.

The awards banquet and Kimball's address will conclude a daylong public symposium entitled "In Search of a Water Ethic in Nebraska" — a combined effort of environmental conservation interests throughout the state.

Omaha Doctor, Cassidy, Rites Slated Monday

Omaha (AP) — Funeral services will be Monday afternoon for Dr. Waldron A. Cassidy, a founder of the Omaha Hearing School for Children.

The 79-year-old long-time physician and surgeon died Friday.

A native of Shelby, Iowa, Dr. Cassidy was graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in 1918. He practiced in Omaha from 1934 until his retirement in 1955.

He became a trustee of Joslyn Art Museum in 1947 and was a trustee emeritus at the time of his death.

Survivors include his widow and a daughter.

Alabama Oil Possible

Houston (AP) — Initial tests on an 18,000-foot Alabama well could indicate a significant discovery, a Getty Oil Co. spokesman says.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
